Around the fire, one wintry night, The farmer's rosy children sat; The fagot lent its blizing light, And mirth went around, and harmless chat.

The Farmer's Fireside.

When, bark ! a gentle hand they hear Low tapping at the bolted door, And thus to gain their willing ear, A seeble voice was heard implore.

"Cold blows the blast across the moor, The sleet drives hissing in the wind; You toilsome mountain lies before, A dreary treeless waste behind. "My eyes are dim and weak with age,

No road; no path can I descry; And these poor rags ill stand the rage Of such a keen inclement sky. "So faint I am, these tottering feet,

No more my palsied frame can bear; My freezing heart forgets to beat, And drifting snow my tomb prepare. "Open your hospitable door,

And shield me from the biting blast, Cold, cold it blows across the moor, The weary moor that I have passed." With hasty steps the farmer ran,

And close beside the fire they place The poor half-frozen begg ar man, With shaking limbs and pale blue face. The little children flocking came, .

And chased his frozen hands in theirs; And busily the good old dame A comfortable mess prepares. Their kindness cheered his drooping soul,

And slowly down his wrinkled cheek The big round tear was seen to roll, And told the thanks he could not speak.

The children then began to sigh, And all their merry chat was o'er; And yet they felt, they knew not why. More glad than they bad done before.

Ask Me not to Drink.

Fair lady, ask me not to drink A toast to thee to-night; For broken vows; and blasted hopes Expose the demon's blight. Put back the wine-1 dare not taste-Put back the spankling bowl; For who bath quaffed a draught so deep,

And reached a blissful goal? O, ask me not ! there lies within A poison deep and tire; And every drop but serves the more To fan the latent fire, Each draught will quench my sense of guilt.

And blast youth's budding hope; Each drop will sink me deeper still, In moral night to grope.

O, press me not to touch the cup! Within are glaring eyes, And starring widows, hungry babies, And freezing orphan's cries; .Then ask me not to drink;

O, tempt me not, but spare my soul From death's eternal brink. I have three sisters, mildly fair, Like angels round my way; Whose love is like the stars that shine With undiminished ray;

Shall they be doomed to see me fall A pray to maddening drink; And shundered be the love that binds

Or snapp'd the golden link? Another sleeps where sadly wave The willows in the vale; And midnight whispers from the sky Come on the sighing gale;

She passed as summer's breath

In life's incipient bloom; Then tempt me not; I would not mar Her slumber in the tomb. POLITICAL.
