Song in Praise of Spring.

BY SIRRY CORRWALL. When the wind blows, In the sweet rose-tree, And the cows lows On the fragrant les, And the stream flows All bright and free,

'Tis not for me, 'tis not for thee; 'Tis not for any one bere I trow; The gentle wind bloweth, The happy cow loweth, The merry stream floweth,

For all below ! Oh the Spring ! the beautiful Spring ! She shineth and smileth on everything !

Where comes the sheep? To the rich man's moor, Where cometh sleep? To the bed that's poor. Peasants must weep, And kings ecdure; This is a fate that none can cure ; . Yet Spring doth all she cas, I trow; She bringeth the bright hours, She weareth the sweet flowers, She dresseth ber bowers

For all below ! Oh the Spring! the beautiful Spring 1 She shineth and smileth on everything !
