The Bride's Farewell.

The bour has come, the parting hour, That bears me from my home. On bended knees I've sought for power And must each tie that fondly binds Be severed now forever And moulder 'neath oblivion's shrine ? O, God I forbid it ever.

But distance now must hold each heart In love's unyielding chain, And bush with hope the tears that start . And soothe the parting pain. I go to share the fate of one On whom I look with pride, And God will deign to smile upon A fond and trusting Bride.

When far from dear and cherished ones I'll sit me oft alone; I'll think me then of hours gone by Of childbood's sunny scenes; How swift those golden years have fled, Like summer's sunlit beams!

My girlhood days—they too, are o'er, Each idle vision fied; Still memory's laden store Sweet recollections shed A holy sunshine o'er the past, And hopeful dreams unfold The bappy influence that it cast

Around my wakening soul.

To those I held so dear.

But lo ! the parting bour is here, I cannot linger now, I'll strive to bide each rising fear. And soothe my throbbing brow, But parting throws a saddening spell, And calls the glistening tear; And silently I lisp farewell, Rat hash my heart ! cast out each thought - at whispers of regret, fate has called on us to part. - will not forget, They will bear is in their evening prayer, To mercy's glitte. L'e throne; And guarded safe by a. "el's care, I'll dream me oft of home.

THE CAPTAIN'S DAUGHTER.

We were crowded in the cabin, Not a seal did dare to sleep ; It was midnight on the waters, And a storm was en the deep.

Tis a fearful thing in Winter. To be shattered in the blast; And to hear the rattling trumpet Thunder, "Cast away the mast !"

So we shuddered there in silence-For the stoutest held his breath-While the hungry sea was roaring, And the breakers talk'd with Death.

And we saddly sat in darkness, Each one busy at his prayers. "We are lost P' the captain shoutes, As he staggered down the stairs.

But his little daughter whisper'd, As she took his icy hand, "Is not God upon the ocean, Just the same as on the land ?"

Then be kiss'd the little maiden. And be spoke in better cheer : And we anchor'd safe in harbour, When the morn was shining clear.
