MEASURING THE BABY.

We measured the riotous baby Against the cottage wall-A lily grew at the threshold, And the baby was just as tall ! A royal tiger-lily, With spots of purple and gold,

Without the blue birds whistled High up in the old roof trees, And to and fro at the window The red rose rocked her bees; And the wee pink fists of the baby

Were never a moment still,

Snatching at shine and shadow

And a heart like a jewe'led chalice,

The fragrant dew to hold.

That danced on the lattice still. His eyes were wide as bluebells-His mosth like a flower unblown-Two little bare feet, like funny white mice Peeped out from his snowy gown; And we thought, with a thrill of rapture

When Jane rolls around with her roses, We'll measure the baby again. Ah mel In a darkened chamber, With the sunshine shut away, Through tears that fell like a bitter rain, We measured the baby to-day; And the little bare feet that were dimpled

That yet had a touch of pain,

And sweet as a budding rose, Lay side by side together, In the hush of a long repose. . Up from the dainty pillow, White as the risen dawn, The fair little face lay smiling,

With the light of heaven thereon-And the dear little bands, like rose leaves Dropped from a rose, lav still, Never to snatch at the sunshine That crept to the shrouded sill.

We measured the riceping baby With ribbone white as snow, For the shining resewood casket That waited him below; And out of the darkened chamber We went with a childless moan-To the height of sinless angels Our little one had grown.
