Nightly blessengs come enfolding Those who smile and those who weep; God his weary earth beholding, Folds it in the robe of sleep,

Daily by all waters sowing, If the Word shall stand or fall, Neither questioning nor knowing, For the Lord will care for all.

Nightly comes the Master walking In the vineyard of His love; With his weary brethern talking Of the harvest-home above.

Daily toiling up the mountain, Bow ed with crosses bruised and beat, Scarce is found one cooling fountain Where to bathe our burning feet.

Nightly in the valleys lowly, As of old, with counsel holy; Angel guests may come and go.

Daily careless feet are speeding Where the snares and pitfalls lie; Happy if the danger beeding, They may learn to pass them by.

Nightly may our praises never Cease to Him-the Lord of all-That in Him we stand forever: Near to Ilim, we need not fall.

Daily are two angels writing

Blotting out the deed unboly,

What we do for good or i!l;

One, with smiles, the good inditing, One, the evil, sad and still. Where repentance boweth lowly, Long they wait at close of day,

Ere they bear the book away.

The Wrong Woman.

Two gentlemen of New Orleans, engaged in the prosecution of the great radroad line through Texas, unable to visit their famalies as frequebily as they dezire, and being very dear friends, have occasionally had their wives visit them together at such places as would be most convenient for the ladies to come to Recently the gentlemen advised their beiter halves that they would be at Bras her City on a certain night, and would be very glad it they would join them there. The ladies, as in duty bound. set out accordingly, and arrived at their destina ton about twelve o'clock at night Their busbands had already retired, and occepying adjoining rooms left instructions for their wives to be shown to ther respective appartments. But as usual with waiters a mistake was made. Each man got his neighbor's wife. The contretemps was first discovered by Mr. G-, who kissing his companion
