LETTING the OLD CAT DUE. Not long ago I wandered near A play-ground in the wood, And there heard words from a youngster's li That I've never quite understood.

My face peep over the bush.

But what he pushed or where he went, I could not well make out, On account of the thicket of bending bough That bordored the place about.

The little villain has stoned a cat, Or hung it upon a limb, And lest it to die all alone,' I said, 'But I'll play the mischief with him.'

I forced my way between the boughs, The poor old cat to seek, And what did I find but a swinging child

Her bright hair floated to and tro, Her little red dress flashed by, Was the gleam of her laughing eye.

Estate, Conveyancing, &c. Al Sur She seemed like a bird and a flower in one, And the forest her native place. 'Steady! I'll send you up, my child,' But she stoppod me with a cry-'Go 'way! go 'way! Don't touch me please-

> I'm letting the old cat die.' 'You letting him die?' I cried aghast-Why, where's the cat my dear?' [mar 9-1y And lo! the laughter that filled the woods] Was a thing for the birds to hear.

> > 'Why, don't you know,' said the little maid. The fitting, beautiful elf, That we call it 'letting the old cat die,'

When the swing stops all itself?'
