The South.

"Before St. Mark still glow his steeds of brass, Their gilded collars glittering in the sun; But is not Doria's menace come to pass? Are they not bridled? Venice, lost and won, Her thirteen hundred years of freedom done, Sinks, like sea-weed, into whence she rose Better be whelm'd beneath the waves, and shun, Even in destruction's depth, her foreign foes, From whom submission wrings an infamous repose.

REBEL POETRY. THE STATE AND STARLING. "Looking up, I saw a Starling hung in a little cage; " can't get out-I can't get out, said the Starling."-(Sterne's Sentimental Journey.')

Starling! Starling! airy of wing-Wherefore a lonely prisoner there? Would'st not merrily sport and sing. Free with thy mates, in the boundless air? Up and around the Starling sprang; Frantic, he flattered his cage about. The while his plaint, unchanging, rang-"I can't get out-I can't get out!" Marrland! Marrland! free of heart-

Wherefore art then a captive here? Would'et not, fetterless, hence depart. Girt with the erms of thy kindred dear? Piercing the Union bars there came, Smothered but deep, an answering shout; And still, methought, was the cry the same-"I can't get out-I can't get out!"

BATTLE SONG OF THE MARTLAND LINA To arma! to arms! the fight's begun,

Virginia sounds the call; Her will nith beines' blood is damp, It echors to the hirelings' tramp, Arouse ye, one and all: For gold let Lincoln's legions fight,

Or I lunder's bloody gain; Unbribed, unbought, our swords we draw, To guard our rights, to save our law, Nor shall we strike in vain. We leave ambile our native shores, A band of brothers true;

The Southern caus: we will defend, And battle for it to the end, Against the tyrant's crew. To arms! to arms! the battle waits. Shall rengeance call in vain? The toe is master in our home,

Our brethren wait until we come, To break their galling chain. Shall we, too, bend the stubborn head. In Freedom's temple born? No! rather famine, wounds and death, So we can draw untainted breath,

And buil back torce with scorn. To arms! the cause is ours to win; Our homes are still to save! To arms! our brethren are in chains, The tyrant's birelings tread our plains,-Arm! Freedom or the grave!

Farewell ambile to home and friends! Adieu each tender tie! Recolved, we mingle in the tide, Where charging equadrons furious ride. To conquer or to die.

To arm-! to arms! "Old Maryland!" High sounds the battle call! Combined by Honor's sacred tie, Our word is LAW AND LIBERTY! March forward, one and all! Baltimore County, June 19.

Mr. Russell's Last Letters. We make the following extracts from the letters .

of Mr. Russell to the London Times : MONTHOMERY, May 6, 1861.—Although I have written two letters since my arrival at Charleston, | sava: I have not been able to give an account of many things which have come under my notice, and which appeared to be noteworthy, and now that I am fairly on my travels once more, it seems only too probable that I shall be obliged to pass them By before it or burn.
