It is said that the seven regiments referred to have been drilling for some time, and are thoroughly appointed and ready to start. It is now evident that the main blow against the Confederates will be struck from the federal capital. The army on the right and left banks of the Potomac, distributed so that it can all be concentrated at one point in less than two hours, now consists of fully forty-five thousand effective men, comprising two infantry and one caralty regiment of regulars, twenty-one regiments from the city and State of New York, five from Pennsylvas nia, four from Maine, three from Connecticut, three from Michigan, two from Ohio, two from Massachusetts, one from Rhode Island, and six batteries of light artillery. Ten thousand more men will be added to this immense, body early next week. Ten thousand, with the District militie, will be sufficient for the defence of the capital, so that a grand army of forty-five thousand can be moved against the confederates. With the aid of Geu. Patterson's corps d'armee il 6 will be more than sufficient to break the line of the confederates, and drive them in the direction of Richmond. Gen. McClelland has been instructed to sweep the last restige of secession both out of Northwestern and Southwestern Virginia. His army will be strongly reinforced for immediate operations South of the Kanawha river.
