The different orators of the patriot party had in turn addressed the meeting, loud in complaint and accusation, but guarded and cautious on every point which might look like an approach towards treasonable expressions, or direct exhortations to resistance. Adams placed himself in the pulpit, and sat quietly listening to all their harangues; at length he rose and made a few remarks, which he closed with the following pithy apologue: "A Grecian philosopher who was lying asleep on the grass, was suddenly roused by the bite of some animal on the palm of his hand. He closed his hand quickly as he awoke, and found he had caught in it a small field mouse. ] As he was examining the little animal which had a dated to attack him, it bit him unexpectedly a second time: he dropped it, and it escaped. Now, to despair of the commonwealth. THE MAXIM MAY fellow-citizens, what think you was the reflection which this triding circumstance gave birth to, in a the mind of the philosopher?
