The refusal of the Paris Moniteur to print the sentence in Mr. Lincoln's message, which speaks of the rights of the United States being everywhere respected by Foreign Powers, causes considerable comment here, as the act is believed to possess a significance of deep import.

At this meeting, the plan campaign on their part underwent several important modifications; and as the general result of the meeting a bolder and more aggressive mode of warfare was determined on, that had hitherto been contemplated. Up to this time I am positive in saying an attack on Washington had formed no part of their plans. It had been agreed, one. But now it was determined to abandon this l course, and to assume the offensive, until three great objects shall have been achieved. They are:

Perhaps it may tend somewhat to the solution of this enigmatical advertisement to add, that the three newspapers which the men of New York in a certain contingency propose to edit, are the BILAS WARNER, or THE WEAVER OF RATELOE, Journal of Commerce, the Day Book, and the Daily News. However, from the fact that the proprietor of at least one of these journals atblied to the Superintendent of Police this afternoon, for a sufficient force to protect his office against an attack which he had reason to believe] would be made, one must conclude that the publie are not to be permitted to supplant him in the

The agent of a leading capitalist, who owns a dozen or more of these houses in the sixteenth ward, in which are some three hundred and fifty tenants, tells me his total returns to-day, instead of being $3,000 or thereabouts, did not exceed $96.
