HABEAS CORPUS.

Next to personal security, says Mr. Justice Blackstone, and preserve the personal liberty of individuals. This personal liberty consists in the power of locomotion, of changing situations, of associating with such persons as one pleases, of being able to change one's own abode, or to travel, or to reside, unless by due course of law, or restraint, unless by due course of law.

By the Petition of Right, 3 Car. 1st, it is enacted that no person shall be imprisoned or detained without cause shown, or by which he may be taken without cause shown, or by which he may be taken without cause shown, or by which he may be taken without cause shown.

Historical Parallels. We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

John Adams, Letter to Jefferson, Nov. 12, 1813. A town meeting of Boston had been called at the Old South Church, in consequence of some new resolutions upon the rights of the people.

The honorable gentleman who presided, told us that to present abuses in our government we will assemble in convention, ready to defend the rights of the people.
