The Potomat Closed. On inquiring at the Navy-Yard, last night, we learned that the only boats that had come up the river during the day were the Resolute and the Reliance. In passing the Confederate batteries at Shipping Point they sustained a heavy fire, but escaped without any material damage. From other sources we received the information that the Resolute was towing up two transports, and found the river obstructed by a chain stretched from the Virginia to the Maryland shore, protected by a salvanced. battery. The Resolute succeeded in crossing the chain, but the first transport, which was heavily laden, was caught by it, and the hawser parting, at Bologna. she drifted over under the guns of the battery and was captured.
