GRAND TRADE IN BRADSTREET'S TO EUROPE.—The following is a comparative statement of the exports, exclusive of specie, from New York to foreign ports, for the week ending October 1, and since January 1:

Table with 3 columns: Year, Value, and Percentage. Rows for 1860, 1861, and 1862.

The principal portion of this great increase, comprises breadstuffs and provisions, and from the accounts from all quarters of Europe, the demand bids fair to be very heavy during the ensuing year.

"At Edinburgh, wheat was two shillings per quarter dearer." "The Irish markets have risen on wheat and sound old corn."

"Spain shares in the deficiency with Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy and Portugal. The Spanish crop of wheat varied in different places, but was below an average."

"The French intelligence sustains the foregoing views." "The threshing rears more and more the deficiency in the wheat crop."

"It is an invariable practice among professional 'tea tasters' never to make the infusion with water which has been already boiled, but on the contrary, to take fresh water, and use it immediately in boiling."

"The Curative Effects of Grapes.—Dr. Herpin, of Metz, has recently published a very interesting account of the curative effect of grapes, in various disorders of the body."

OLD FOGY DOCTRINES.

"We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness."

Our liberties and safety cannot be depended upon if the King of Great Britain should be allowed to hold our forts and cannon, or to have authority over a single regiment of American troops.

"The glorious spirit of liberty is vanquished and left without hope but in a miracle, said desponding patriots. I confess, said Samuel Adams, we have, as yet, no other resource, but to persevere in our resistance."

"Here, said Massachussetts, as he lamented the cold heart of the timid good, and for himself, trod the thorny path of resistance to the grandeur of the world."

"But in truth the cry of Dunmore did not rouse among the Africans a passion for freedom. To them bondage in Virginia was not a lower condition of being than their former one; they had no regrets for ancient privileges lost, their memory prompted no demand for political changes; no struggling aspirations of their own had invited Dunmore's interposition, no memorial of their grievances had reached his office."

"The majority of Congress, acutulous not to outrun the conventional sympathies of their constituents and pleasing themselves by confining to the speedy restoration of peace, not only made no adequate preparation for resistance, but would not consent to relieve the states from anarchy by sanctioning the institution of Government in the several colonies."

"When Washington learned the fate of the rich Virginia of his own country, for so he called it, he burst into tears, and wept with a grief which he could not suppress."

"They closed their statement in the words of their new member, Jefferson: 'These Colonies now feel the complicated and extensive ties of commerce. We are reduced to the alternative of choosing an unconditional submission to irritated ministers, or resistance by force. The latter is our choice. We have counted the cost of this contest, and find nothing so dreadful as voluntary slavery.'"

"The loss of officers was observed to be disproportionately great, and the gloom in the quarters of the British was deepened by the reflection that they had fought not against an enemy, but against their fellow subjects and kindred; not for the promotion of civil or religious freedom, but for the supremacy of one part of the empire over another."

"Upon the whole it has been the policy of the British authority to oblige us to supply our wants at their market, which is the dearest in the known world, and to compel us to trade with them, to the detriment of their commerce, and our own interest."

"The wife of Colonel Pakeney is distinguished as one of those heroic and self-sacrificing women of the revolution, whose integrity and fortitude lent an able support to the cause of their country."

"They railed on with headlong indirection, thinking not to involve the empire in a civil war, but to subdue the Americans by force. The first step towards inspiring terror was, to declare war on a state of rebellion, and to pledge the armies of the whole force of Great Britain to its reduction; the next, by prohibiting the American trade in Great Britain; the next, to call out the armies on the coast of the Colonies; the next, to execute a general invasion."
