MESSAGE OF PRESIDENT DAVIS
TO THE CONFEDERATE CONGRESS.
WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—The Richmond papers of Wednesday last contain President Jefferson Davis' message to the Congress of the Confederate States, in which, after the usual congratulations, he says:

"The operations of the army soon to be partially interrupted by the approaching winter, have afforded a protection to the country and shed a lustre upon its arms through the trying vicissitudes of more than an arduous campaign, which entire our brave volunteers to our praise and our gratitude.

Further on, he says: "After more than seven months of war, the enemy have not only failed to extend their occupancy of our soil, but new States and Territories have been added to our Confederacy, who, in their threatening a march upon this point to assume the defensive; and upon a fair comparison between the two belligerent nations, military means and financial competence, the Confederate States are relatively much stronger now than when the struggle commenced."

"He speaks in high terms of the people of Missouri, who have, he says, 'conducted the war in the face of almost unparalleled difficulties, with a spirit and success alike worthy of themselves and of the great cause in which they are struggling.'" "Finding that the Confederate States were about to be invaded through Kentucky, and that her people, after being deceived into a mistaken security, were intruded and in danger of being subjugated by the Federal forces, our armies were marshaled into that State to repel the enemy and prevent their occupation of certain strategic points which would have given them great advantages in their march upon the Capital."

"As a financial system, it has worked well so far, and promises the most successful results. To the extent that Treasury notes may be issued, the government is enabled to borrow money without interest, and thus facilitate the conduct of the war. This extent is measured by the portion of the field of circulation which the notes can be made to occupy. The proportion of the field thus occupied depends again upon the amount of debts for which they are receivable, and when due, not only to the Confederate and State Governments, but also to corporations and individuals, are payable in this medium, a large amount of it may be circulated at par.

"There is every reason to believe that the Confederacy is in a flourishing and successful condition.
The provision that these notes shall be convertible into stock, bearing 8 per cent. interest, at the pleasure of the holder, ensures them against a depreciation below the value of that stock, and no considerable sum can be raised and paid so long as the interest shall be punctually paid.

"The punctual payment of this interest has been secured by the act passed by you at the last session, imposing a rate of taxation as a means to provide sufficient means for that purpose. For the successful prosecution of this war, it is indispensable that the means of transporting troops and military supplies be furnished as far as possible in such manner as not only not to interrupt the commercial intercourse between our people nor place a check upon their productive energies.

The distinguished gentlemen whom, with your approval at the last session, I commissioned to represent the Confederacy at certain foreign courts, have been recently seized by the Captain of a United States ship-of-war on board a British steamer, on their voyage from the neutral Spanish port of Havana to England.

The United States have thus claimed a general jurisdiction over the high seas, and entering a British ship sailing under the country's flag, violated the rights of embassy, for the most part held sacred, even amongst barbarians, by seizing our ministers whilst under the protection of, and within the dominions of a neutral nation.

These gentlemen were as much under the jurisdiction of the British Government upon that ship and beneath its flag as if they had been on its soil and a claim on the part of the United States to seize them in the streets of London would have been as well founded as that to apprehend them where they were taken.

Had they been malefactors and citizens even of the United States, they could not have been arrested in a British ship or on British soil, unless under the express provisions of a treaty, and according to the forms therein provided for the extradition of criminals.

But, although they should be benefited by the enforcement of this law, so solemnly declared by the great powers of Europe, we are not dependent on that enforcement for the successful prosecution of the war.

"The Richmond Whig in commenting on the message, says—
"We are two peoples from this time forth—we are aware the Yankees are determined, happen what may, to conquer us. For the rest, we shall depend upon ourselves. Liberty is always won where there exists the unconquerable will to be free; and we have reason to know the strength that is given by a conscious sense not only of the magnitude, but of the righteousness of our cause."

FROM NEW YORK.
The New York correspondent of the Philadelphia Inquirer says:
There is reason to believe that the sympathizers with the Confederates, if not rebels themselves, are being used by the Federal Government as informers rather freely of late, to correspond with their friends in England; and with a view to put a stop to it, without incurring the odium of coun-tenancing a system of espionage, the Post Office authorities here I have reason to believe, have been in correspondence with the State Department and the Postmaster General at Washington.

of the Potomac will be reviewed near the Capital, by General McClellan, the President and the Cabinet.

A foraging expedition yesterday secured nearly one hundred loads of forage, and returned safely last night.

FROM MISSOURI.
St. Louis, November 22.—Judge Thomas L.
Richardson, who has been confined as a prisoner of war in the hands of Colonel Moore, of the Home Guards, was shot dead while standing at the window of the Court House, in Memphis, Scotland county, on Monday last. Colonel Moore had offered a reward of $1,000 for the apprehension of the assassin.

FROM FORTRESS MONROE.
The steamer Constitution, Capt. Porter, arrived here at half-past seven o'clock this morning, and aggravating to say, does not enlighten us one particle as to events going on down in Dixie. The same old story has to be repeated to-day that has been told so often, nothing new since our last.

FROM KENTUCKY.
We have the Louisville Journal of Tuesday—
It says:
The only channel of uninterrupted communication at present between the loyal and Confederate States is through Henderson, Ky. There is quite a local trade between Henderson and Hopkinsville and the citizens of each place pass and repass daily without obstruction. It is well understood that Senator Lowell and Henry Dillman, of Henderson, sympathize with the rebellion, and that they are in daily communication with the Confederates at Hopkinsville.
