For the Saltimore Chapter. OH! SING TO ME LOVE! (IMPROMPTY.)

Oh! sing to me Love, sing that song I loved it well of yore, And now it leads my fancy back To days which come no more-Then sing love, sing! each gentle lay Shall charm all thoughts of care away.

Oh! sing to me thus, while I gase On thy soft eyes of bive, And dream another's angel look In thy sweet smile I viewe. Of one who sung in days goes by, That well remembered melody.

Oh! sing to me those scraph notes, Call back bright hours fled, And thou, sweet flower, more fair than all; Now numbered with the dead-That voice, these tenes Boat round me yet, Sing, love! hid me grief forget. EMILY.
