

THURSDAY MORNING, MARCH 11, 1841.

Rumons. We pay little regard to the many idle rumors of the day, which somebody has set the reports says, that President Harrison has had to peremptorily forbid illegal payments which were being made at the treasury, by the incumbents under the late administration. Another states, that Mr. Fox, the British minister, has demanded the instant release of McLeod; and, in case of refusal, will ask for his passports. It is probable that Mr. Fox has had a correspondence with the Secretary of State on McLeod's case, in compliance with new instructions; but we disbelieve that it is of the character represented .-The opinion appears to prevail that McLeod is innocent of the offence with which he is charged. If so, his acquittal will remove this bone of coninterfere, whatever may be the tone of the communications made by Mr. Fox-and knowing that the President is powerless in the business, we do not suppose that Mr. Fox will press the point.
