WOLUME IV.]

sent me, while sick, the greatest deliracies of the season.

Oh! Friendship! angel of the earth, Descended from the realms above; In Heaven's high hall thou had'st thy birth, Twin sisters of supernal Love.

Thou com'st with woman's winning grace, Seen in her dark and dazzling eye; And in her fascinating face, We mark thee, yet we know not why.

(161) Woman, in thy heart is Heaven, Thy goodness fancy may not sketch; To thee the virtues all are given, And, snatch'd from thee, man were a wretch.

Ladies, forgive the Bard, who kneels To wake the harp at virtue's shrine; For oh! he has a heart that feels The grailtude that is divine!

He never bow'd at Woman's feet, Or sung in vain to woman's ear;)h! there is something passing sweet, In woman's smile, and woman's tear!

God grant that you may never know The cruel ills that I have known! But may life's current softly flow, Where sweetest, fairest flowers are strown.
