

MONDAY MORNING, MARCH 22, 1841.

(3-11 o intimated in our paper of Saturday, that we would perform for some of our cotemporaries the same service that is rendered to vessels by the steam tow-boats—that is, tow them along if they would make fast to our stern. No sooner said than done-for we have a black, piratical looking lugger already in our wake, endeavoring to hitch on us to prevent herself from sinking. Prom her suspicions appearance we are yet in doubt whether we shall extend the hand of relief, lavished upon her thousands, for a few nights' narrow minded think of nobody but their noble or give her a shot from our stern-chaser, and send ber where the Sun will never more shine on her.

A duel was not necessary to establish the reputation of either for personal bravery; and the spirit which should animate every gentleman of correct feelings and principles was manifested in the explanations which amicably closed the controversy Had Mr. Clay pursued another course—had he not exhibited his characteristic frankness and amiability on the occasion, we should have confessed that we had misunderstood lus character, and formed an imperfect estimate of his principles. The conduct of Mr. King is also entitled to the highest praise.

We heartily concur in the view taken of this National Intelligencer, who says:

VIVE LA LAGATELLE. Thank Heaven the blue 1 avre of Connecticut which forbade a man to kiss his wife on Sunday, are no longer in force; and wet some of the spirit which caused their enactment still exists, if we judge from a resolution recently passed at a public inveting in Bethlehem, to that state. It seems that General Harrison in i exchanging compliments with the ladies of Pittsburg, stated that in his youth he had exchanged fifteen of whom were fined one dollar and costs, locks with a fair damsel of that city. This, and his having meekly received the kisses of some of the ladies of the Monumental City, has given i great offence to some fellows, who have no more blood in their reins than a dried eel-skip. Hear their sage resolution:
