To be sung by the Baltimore Musical Associa-P. Hill. [The whole assembly are invited to unite in singing.] Hark! a nation's wail of grief On each passing breeze is borne! For a nation's honored chief From its bleeding heart is torn.

He who lately near us stood, Ripe in honors as in years,-He,—the wise, the great, the good,— Claims the tribute of our tears.

Like a transient tale that's told, Like a dream of yesterday, Like the pageant we behold, He from earth has pass'd away.

From his highest sphere of fame, Midst his country's joyous breath, Softly, -suddenly he came To the silent shades of death.

Where the patriot fashers sleep In their well-deserved renown-Where the sons of freedom weep, Chieftain! we have laid thee down. God! that rulest over all,

God! that livest while we die, Let thy dread upon us fall, Let us on thyself rely.

Thou! who wast our fathers' God; Thou! who since hast been our own; Tho' we feel thy chast'ning rod, Still we seek thy gracious throne.
