The stores throughout the city were closed, and there was an entire cessation of business of every kind.

There was a slight sprinkle of rain early in that the weather would become unfavorable; but, on the contrary, it proved most auspicious, it being cloudy and cool during the greater part of the day.

The procession was formed on Baltimore street, the right resting on Charles street. Between ten and eleven o'clock, it moved in the following order:

> Sung by the Ballimore Musical Association at the Harrison Funeral Solemnities, Baltimore, April 26, 1841. Written for the occasion, at the request of the B. M. A. by Rev. S. P. HILL.

Hark! a nation's wail of grief On each passing breeze is borne! For a nation's honored chief From its bleeding heart is torn.

He who lately near us stood, Ripe in honors as in years,-He,—the wise, the great, the good,— Claims the tribute of our tears.

Like a transient tale that's told, Like a dream of yesterday, Like the pageant we behold, He from earth has pass'd away.

From his highest sphere of same, Midst his country's joyous breath, Softly,-suddenly he came

To the silent shades of death. Where the patriot fathers sleep In their well-deserved renown-Where the sons of freedom weep.

Chiestain! we have laid thee down. God! that rulest over all, God! that livest while we die, " Let to be the will hely.

Thou! who wast our fathers wu; Thou! who since hast been our own; Tho' we feel thy chast'ning rod, Still we seek thy gracious throne.

The company of United States Flying Artillery, under command of Capt. Ringgold, having been stationed on Chase's Hill, to the north-west of the monument, when the ceremonies had ceased, fired three vollies from their four brass pieces with a precision which surprised every one. The simultaneous discharge was like the report of a single gun. At the conclusion of the ceremonies at the monument, the procession again [formed and marched down Charles to Baltimore new on hand a large and general assortment of HATS street, where it was dismissed.
