For the Baltimore Clipper. MAGDALEN—A SKETCH.

He sat, the Holy lest of Heaven, While those dark eyes in pity dwelt Upon the bending graceful form Which at his feet in suppliance knelt: Her round white arms were rais'd to Heaven, Her low voice murmur'd forth a prayer, And ne'er in beauty's brightest hour That sinful one seem'd half so fair.

She bowed her head unto the dust, While perfum'd odors breathed around, And throwing loose her glittering hair, The golden tresses swept the ground: She wiped his feet with its rich folds, While o'er her eyes celestial hue Repentance tears had east a mist, Making more eloquent their blue.

The Saviour saw those falling tears, He mark'd the anguish of her tone, And tho' her life was dark with crime, Still penitence could all atone. And oh! how sweet that music came Unto the heart by sorrow riven, When Jesus to the sinner spoke-"Go sin no more, thon art forgiven."
