[Reported for the Baltimore Clipper.] COUNTY COURT. A case came up yesterday, in which Tilghman Compton and others were plaintiffs, and the Baltimore and Susquehanna Rail Road defendants. This is an action brought by plaintiffs, the heirs of the late Thomas Compton, to recover damages. It appears the road passing through these lands is that of the old location; that subsequent to the change of location a jury had awarded only nominal damages, in consideration of, as they then supposed, the value of the lands bring enhanced by the rail road passing through. The location being changed so as not to pass through this place at all, the present action is for damages sustained in the excavation | STOCK FACTORY, No. 1511 Baulthrough a considerable portion of arable land and case was not gotten through with when the court still continues to manufacture STOCKS, COLLARS, Furnishing Store, from Baltimore street, to No 6 and in the United States an immense number, who in cases as proaching consumption, attended with bleedadjourned, and will be resumed this morning.
