As murmuring streams swift flowing, Form a river on their way;

As the first rays of the morning Swell into the bright noon-day; Bo the rose-hued clouds of childhood Yield to Youth's maturersky;

Floating o'er it, joys and sorrows Wait us, as we say "Good-bye." Golden moments passing onward, Berne on Time's untiring wing. Carry with them school-giri pleasures,

And the days of parting bring. Teachers, schoolmates, we must leave you; Sorrow's tides the bosom swell; Broken is the tie that bound us.
