Thwarted for the time, such men may be; but with a genius for "Hanking" and pushing shead, splendidly illustrated by General Grant from Spotsylvania onward to where he holds Richmond by the throat, and by Sherman who overcomes obstacles to the capture of the Southern Sebastopol and dates bis last letter from 9 months. its centre, who doubts of final success by the armies of the Republic? who has the faintest | Strinbach, aged 11 months and 13 days. misgiving as to the fact that the "North will be the last to leave off?"

But there are some other matters to which what we have we advanced is but introductory. Mr. Lincoln and the whole Administration are at present soundly abused for a hard hearted determination to make war, and W. Zimmerman, of this city. for the simple reason that the set who outered upon the conflict with such eagerness have at lest, and long ago, gotten more than enough of it. Because beaten and on the point of being whipped into absolute submission, they would now gladly have it forgotien that they began the war, that they would have the conflict whether or no. Let the American people never forget the facts in clamor of men, who are stimulated to it by the certain defeat foreshadowed-let none can with honor be made to the murderous host still in the field for no just cause-"Lay down your arms."

And now, by way of reminding the loyal of our readers of what is in danger of being forgotten,-with the purpose of showing that the North has indeed good reasons for being "the last to leave off," let us go back to some exhibets made by those who, at the outset, exulted in the consciousness that the rebels, and | stock of clothing cannot be excelled.
