MARYLAND MALCONTENTS—HON. REVERDY JOHNSON'S LETTER DENOUNCING MR. LINCOLN.

Our readers will find in this morning's Clipper a letter from Hon. Reverdy Johnson, denouncing Mr. Lincoln's administration. Maryland has for the whole period of the war been peculiarly unfortunate in one respect, particularly in her public servants in the first instance, in the character of the people in the next. She at different times has had in responsible positions, in public trust, those who have done their best to betray her to shame and suffering; and on the other hand, she has had along with certain true public servants, a loyal and reliable popular sentiment that would not be betrayed.

In the beginning of our troubles it was fortunate beyond all conception, that she had in her Chief Magistrate, one thoroughly true to his convictions, true to the State and to the nationality. It was unfortunate that there were others here in the Legislature and in Congress, who did their best to bring her to ruin, but who have succeeded merely in railing themselves. "Triable comments" was long since laid on the shelf, minus a limb lost in his futile endeavors to bring the enemy into the State and city; and now we have the redoubtable Hradley Johnson, after many former mishaps, rendered powerless for further mischief. The Government and its brave soldiers could take care of such as these, could checkmate them because their attempts upon the State were open, defiant, or if you please—brave. But when it comes to men practiced in political arts, "cunning of fence," bold in "razing" the champion of the Union cause—"under the fifth rib" whilst putting the query—"art thou in health, my brother?"—what can be said?

As the first notable exemplar of this school, the State was blessed with that prominent friend of Breckinridge and Vallandigham, that ambassador to Richmond whilst holding a seat in Congress—Henry May. The people, learning his proclivities and instincts, quickly disposed of him—he dropped so completely out of sight that he has scarcely been heard of since. We need do no more next than allude to that famous seceder Legislature, the dialytic portion of it,—elected on totally different issues—so summarily snuffed out by McClellan. Politically, the "last trump" would hardly resurrect them.

Well, the State floundered along the best way she could, taking Henry Winter Davis and his heroic radicalism, his determined admiration for Mr. Lincoln, as one of the next best chances—in its degree—to recognize and aid the Unionism of the State. But disappointed in his "great expectations," soured, angry, he soon manifested a determination to ruin where he could not rule. Favored as the dispenser of political favors and honors, here, constituted a petty dictator almost, "Jeshurun waxed fat and he kicked." He was by no means satisfied with the share of political honors and influence already conceded to him. And so, after attempting to dictate a foreign policy for the President and Cabinet, a movement that, successful, might have involved the nation in a foreign war at a critical period in the great conflict, he turns upon Mr. Lincoln with a ferocity that can be by no means translated as other than that of political rancor, of angry purpose to satisfy a thirst for vengeance. We would be glad to interpret the manifesto otherwise, but it is impossible. It was a dead failure. His colleague in the unworthy attempt,—Wade—already repenting, is reported to have taken measures to undo his work, whilst the story is current that Mr. Davis will do the same thing at an early day. We trust so.

We say Maryland has been unfortunate in her accredited Union men; and now not deterred by the example of Mr. Davis, his miserable failure as an assailant of the President, we have the blunder repeated. This time the case is much the same, and the assailant is the Hon. Reverdy Johnson, another recipient of favors and honors from the people and the administration.

Mr. Johnson was put into his present position of United States Senator with many misgivings on the part of the true Unionmen of the State; and nothing but his apparently earnest support to Union measures at one time gave him that honor. But he, like his colleague in the House, Mr. Davis, has been by no means clear in his record. Almost from the first, the word was abroad that Mr. Johnson was an efficient abettor for those obnoxious to the charge of favoring the rebellion. Privileged, however, and favored as doubtful men are apt to be, drifted along in his eccentric sphere the marvel of the Union men of the State that he should have maintained even the appearance of consistency so long as he has done. The strain upon old prejudices, old modes of thinking was too great however, and he has at last given way—he has turned upon the President who favored, and upon the Union party who treated him, and as the partizan of McClellan, as the conjurer of the Woodruff, of Vallandigham, Seymour, et id omne genus, he will hereafter get no quarter.

One thing in conclusion. It is to be hoped that both Mr. Johnson and Mr. Davis will maintain their present attitude toward the President to the day of the election, for it will tell much for Mr. Lincoln's favor. If they do not, the people of the nation and of Maryland have only to ask themselves whether, if the choice was given them of material out of which to make a President and Vice President, they would take Lincoln and Andy Johnson, or Davis and Reverdy Johnson, and the story is told. And if they would by no manner of means make the change, will they listen to them as advisers, as counselors, as denouncers? The greater part of the evils and misdeeds of Mr. Lincoln and of the nation, have grown out of too much trust in McClellan already; but Mr. Johnson cannot see that a good lawyer, he is a poor politician, nor as a statesman; or as an old writer expresses it, whilst the study and practice of the law has sharpened his intellect, they have—in the case of a blade on a grindstone—narrowed it.

REBEL GROANS—GEORGIA AND SOUTH CAROLINA.

When the rebellion was in the full flush of its great expectations, when the "train-bands" of South Carolina and Georgia, bedizened with holiday lace and plumes, were on their way as to some merry gathering to take possession of the forts on the coast, Governor Brown, of the "Empire State of the South," enjoined his people "to go on with their cotton planting," for, said he, "the war will never reach you."

Well, three years of bitter experience have changed the rebel functionary's tone wonderfully, as we find by "Fast Day Proclamations" he has just issued, a copy of which is now lying before us. He says, speaking of the Federal armies: "Get wicked but powerful enemy."

"Has overrun a large portion of the territory of our own State, as well of the Confederacy, and has laid waste our greatly damaged our cities, towns, villages and fields," &c. A tardy confession this, certainly; and one that it has taken a good deal of hard fighting and beating to extort; but nevertheless, there it is, as a contrast to the first impressions of one of the chiefs of the conspiracy. But, did Governor Brown have the remotest thought of this as a sequel when he was swift to enter upon hostilities, when he hastened to seize Fort Palisade and to garrison it with Savannah troops? Of course he did not. And yet he now looks,—or affects to look—upon the Federal troops as the "aggressors" in this war, forgetful that he took so prominent a part in provoking the "chastisement" of which he complains.

And the Charleston people, too. They also have gotten a good deal more than they bargained for in the outset. When Gov. Pickens announced to the people of that city that the stars and stripes were "humbled," were "forcibly" removed from their localities, when cannon were pealing forth salutes, and bells were ringing a joyous acclaim, did he or any of those around him really begin to imagine the serious consequences that were to follow? We have quoted Gov. Brown, let us quote the Charleston Courier, briefly: "Homesteads that once re-echoed with the sounds of mirth and joy are dark and silent; 'or, in their stead, we behold blighted ruins and asher; rank weeds have taken the place of 'neath golden grain are now ghastly, howling wraiths without gate or enclosure; our marks are forsaken and silent as a grave-yard, and only an occasional foot treads the thoroughfare once gay with splendid equipage, 'beautiful with forms of well dressed women, 'and lovely with the innocent faces of girls and boys. Occupations that administered to the comforts and happiness of all are altogether neglected, institutions of learning are 'closed, desolation dwells in the sanctuaries 'of the Most High, our young men are buried 'by their gray haired parents, or with the blood of their deadly wounds on their soldier's humble attire are buried in the field 'where they fell, without pauper or service."

And yet, these are the people who entered upon this fearful war with fenshish delight, who laughed at the idea that the war would ever reach their doors, who exulted at the prospect of carrying havoc and bloodshed and desolation—"fire and sword" to Northern homes. Truly, "their sin has found them out."

FREMONT'S WITHDRAWAL.

The letter of John O. Fremont abandoning the attempt to supersede Mr. Lincoln, is a "parthian arrow," but drawn so weakly that the Administration will not feel it. Although he puts his withdrawal as based on a desire for harmony and the success of the Republican party, it is a case of "thank you for nothing!" So far as he is concerned, it is the old case of the "fly on the cart wheel," and the Union cause will roll onward all the same whether he is on or off. But he is likely to make a worse speculation of it than even "Little Mac." Throwing up his Major General's commission—a good thing in its way,—he is left perfectly adrift in the current of events; whilst the "Little Napoleon" may for many his shoulder-straps at watering places for many a long year to come, as idle pensioner to that extent on the bounty of the Government. Thankful for small favors though, from politicians of these schools, let us be glad that we are clear of Fremont; and for Little Mac—in the long years of peace that are to follow, he will be a capital hand to figure at military reviews, all he is really good for.

THE "TWENTY-FIRST INDIANA."

One of the members of the old Twenty-first Indiana Regiment, formerly stationed in Baltimore, writes us a pleasant letter from Fort Williams, near Baton Rouge, in which he tells us that the Clipper is a regular favorite with the command, and "home" thought of than even some of their "home journals." The writer recurs with much satisfaction to the rejoinder of the regiment here, and communicates the information that it has been changed and is now known as the "First Indiana Heavy Artillery." Last winter six hundred of them re-enlisted, and on their return to Indiana, the command was recruited up to sixteen hundred and thirty-two. The regiment has been in several hard battles and done good service, and we take pleasure in placing the facts on record for the benefit of their old friends in this quarter.

THE VOTE OF THE MARYLAND SOLDIERS.

A friend calls our attention to the fact that it is high time to provide tickets for the soldiers from this State privileged to vote in the coming election, if the Union cause is to be done full justice. It will take some time to get the tickets to them, and hence not a moment should be lost. We hope those whose special duty it may be to see to this, will act promptly.

MAYOR CHAPMAN'S RECORD. We print on the fourth page of our paper an admirable summary of the valuable public services rendered by the Hon. John Lee Chapman to the city of Baltimore, and we ask the loyal reader's careful attention to it as a special comment on analysis. Let the voters of Baltimore, especially the tax-payers, remember this on the day of election.

THE WEEKLY CLIPPER, to be issued to-day, will be found to contain the best news summary that has been given for a long period. The particulars of the great battle in the Shenandoah valley, more of great importance in the political world, domestic and foreign details, and the markets and financial matters, will challenge the attention of the reader, leaving nothing to render it complete. Purposing to make the Weekly Clipper a complete compendium of all the news afloat, as well as a reliable means of getting well posted as to political events, we cannot doubt its capacity to please. To be had at the counter in single wrappers, ready for mailing,—price three cents.

McClellan's History in Three Sentences.

McClellan's failure as a commander, and his bankruptcy in every quality of a soldier, are history, the most shameful in the annals of American politics, and the most humiliating in military biography. Attorney-General Hanna, of Indiana, recalled it recently at Indianapolis, in a speech, where brevity and truth were his motto. He said that "Old Abe" exhausted every appliance known to human ingenuity to make him a gallant and successful warrior. While the people cried out for his resignation, the officers of his war, "For God's sake, give us a general who will do something, who is equal to the demand upon him, who will not give the grave of the nation within the sound of the enemy's cannon," he made, in the eyes of Congress and of the Cabinet was wearing and finally wore out with the inordinate cost of vain display and of the failure of movements, "Old Abe" was removed, and a more efficient and energetic man, who would not give the grave of the nation within the sound of the enemy's cannon, was appointed. "He, who has overrun a large portion of the territory of our own State, as well of the Confederacy, and has laid waste our greatly damaged our cities, towns, villages and fields," &c.

A prominent citizen of Boston is to open a home in that city for incurable consumptives, where they may find only a shelter from the chilling winds of an unfeeling world, but where they may find the luxury, ease and comfort of a Urubian home. This is the first institution of the kind ever opened in this country.
