RELIANCE UPON THE GEORGIA TRAITORS FUTILE.

Considerable attention has of late been drawn to certain pelittelens of Georgia, as to those who might make that Blate the chtering wedge to rend saundar the rebel Confederacy. We have never believed since these rumors of possible negotiations with Gen. Bherman were noised around, that anything was to be expected from that quarter. There is not, in the entire Scuth, a more thorough-paced demagogue and political knave than Gov. Brown; because whilst from the outset of the war pandering to the worst prejudices and passions of the ignorant people who abound there, he had not failed at the same time, place everything he could rake together at the past of Maryland. the service of the aristocratic conspirators he "men and ron-slaveholders who have but collittle property at stake upon the issue;"comust be admitted, however, that a large upreportion of the wealthy class of our "reonle have avoided the favers of the camp trand the dangers of the battle-field, and have "remained at home in comparative case and "comfort with their families."

Now Gov. Brown could say this, whilst on h the other hand recking to arouse the worst passions of the poorer class of whites in favor of the war, by telling them that the negro, if the Government succeeded, would be their equal; would "sit on juries" and "mairy their daughters." And to spproach them all the better, he has taken of easien to remind them that he himself was essentially of them, was from the upper ountry, from amongst the small farmers of Georgia, and therefore the botter able to sympathize with them.

And then for the other miserable demagogue-Biephens-could any one who remembers his antecedents hope anything from him? A renegate Whig, he joined his old opponents to keep in place; and with a conception as clear as a sumbeam of the purposes and tendenses of the revolution, jet bribed by the paltry, than office he holds, he at once office, if the devil were a cardidate against | he of BALTIMORY desire to return their wheeled around and plunged deeper into the him. Why do I say so? I served with him | sincere thanks to the line Department for their criminal absurdities of the revult than any other of his wicked competrs, as witness his special advocacy of Blavery as the "corner | stone" of the abominable Confederacy.

And it will not do to attempt to excuse him as only "playing a part." If fidelity to principle is ever honored in this world, or treachery | dellar, nor a cent in favor of prosecuting this and cowardice despited, then this man Bie. war, no matter how the money was to be expen

When Henry IV. of France told Pal lissier the "potter," the founder of the beauti ful porcelain manufactures there, that "if he | "did not recaut his errors, he must give him "over to the fary of his enemies;"-the answer of Pallissler was a model for the heroic of purpose in all time! "Must,"-raid be, then near ninety years of age, - "must! that | "compelled you, cannot compel me-I can die "first," and the glorious old man went un. harmed. But could any one expect aught of this kind from a modern demagogue, like Stephens—one who all his life has been the very image of shameless subserviency in order to keep in position?

Why, the record of Hen. John Bell is a far better one than this of Alexander H. Stephens. Mr. Bell was underlably "dragged," forced into the revolt; and except for one speech which might have been untruly as well as truly reported at Knoxville in the outset, we pillars and intricate passage ways of the have beard nething from him to darken the record of a life up to that unfortunate period certainly highly honorable.
