THE NEED OF ACTIVE EXERCISE TO CARRY THE STATE.

The State is in danger, and others realize it, as well as ourselves. We took occasion in our last issue to caution the friends of the Union in regard to the consequences of their remissness and untimely apathy just at the present time, when all other considerations should be forgotten in order to secure the success of our noble and patriotic cause. We have on the principal thoroughfare of the city, right in the centre of the busy current of life, the "headquarters of the Lincoln and Johnson organization," such as it is, yet the localities were gloomily silent, where men struggle to raise or depress it, show more stir and earnestness any day, than the place here men should in the present terrible crisis meet to take counsel together, meet to concert plans to save the State from dishonor, and a rule which may hamper its progress for years to come. The sluggishness in view of the tremendous issues involved is unacceptable.

And what will be our reflections if we fall in our duty upon an occasion when all we have of value is involved? What will be our feelings when cannon thunder elsewhere, and flags are thrown out and bridges blown in commission of the great evil which we profess to detest? What will be our feelings when we see that by our apathy, our disgraceful sluggishness, we have little right to claim a share of the honors awarded to States which have done their whole duty? And we are to work, not for the present alone, but for all time. We are making history now, day by day, that which is to be scanned by freemen whilst society has a being, whilst humanity contends with anarchy and the arts of despotism. Shall we not in the coming election inscribe the name of Maryland high on the column which marks progress, shall we not share the honors to be awarded to our State?

Firstly—do any "what is to be done?" We say the need of the occasion also plea for every pleading seeking after mercy, after the daily profits of trade or commerce, drop his vocation and give a few days to his country. That is all that is wanted. The country has claims upon all, claims made more sacred than ever before. The country has by its soldiers, by its magnificently demonstrated power, kept our roofs over our heads, given us peace, prosperity, insured to us a splendid future. And shall we, basing in grogelling after the profits of the hour, forget this same country in its perils? Shall we not secure by our ballots those success, those victories won by our brethren in the field? Shall they contribute sleepless nights, accept wounds, fatigue, give their lives, and cannot we stand by them for the brief period required to establish their labors? We say, once more—let us arouse ourselves, "let a wrong thing come upon" than ought we have yet experienced. Let an assembly in council, let an stir up the fire of patriotism at present slowly smoldering, let us devise that enthusiasm for the Union such as cannot fail to win for us a glorious success. We can do this—we repeat. A brief but hearty and concerted effort, and the echoes of the cannon and bells that celebrate our triumph shall reverberate and cheer the hearts of freemen in every land and to all time.

THE OFFICIAL OPINION OF THE GOVERNOR ON PROMULGATING THE NEW CONSTITUTION.

This document is too lengthy for our columns just at this juncture, yet as an able and exhaustive argument in favor of receiving the votes which have decided the fate of the New Constitution, and therewith the destinies of the people of Maryland, it is admirable and conclusive. Patiently taking up the prominent objections put forward by the legal opponents of the measure and disposing of them one by one, he leaves little or nothing to be said on that subject. He quotes the doctrine rendered by the popular voter. Admitting the trivial irregularities which have occurred in some cases incident to voting by the soldiers, which he scathingly rebuffs, he gives to the opponents of the measure all the benefits they can possibly claim, dealing from the outset with them in so courteous and fair a way, as to leave them no good reason to consider themselves aggrieved.

Whatever may be said by any in objecting to the final acceptance of the New Constitution, one thing is certain, that no one who knows the stern sense of duty and the conscientiousness which has ever governed the present State Executive in all his acts, will believe that he has knowingly transcended his powers. And for legal reasons, for the real ability to deal with precisely such cases as this in hand, his decision will be received as would that of the highest legal tribunal. And fortunate it is that this position had been elevated to allow as a mere politician, had he not been able on various occasions to hold his own, as the phraseology is, in the midst of a bar anything but a body, the consequences might as well have been humiliating to the cause of the Union so often assailed. For this able "opinion," then, in regard to the legal aspects of the case in establishing, finally, the New Constitution, the Governor deserves the gratitude and thanks of the people; and in the great change thus wrought in the State, his name will be honorably connected with the commonwealth as long as it endures.
