SPACE. LETTER FROM CAMP PAROLE.

[Correspondence of the Baltimore Clipp:] CAMP PAROLE, NOV. 12th, 1864. Glory to God! - Three Hundred Cheers, and One Hundred Guns Fired at Camp Parole

in Honor of the Great Union Victory. Speeches were made by Col. A. R. Root, trial before the Military Commission. Colonel Commanding, Rev'd Mr. Coulton, Chaplain of Camp Parole, Capt. John Power, Government detectives upon the charge Capt. and A. Q. M., and others; the whole nflair passed off in the most orderly manner and the greatest enthusiasm was manifested. The meeting then adjourned with three cheers to meet at the city of Annapolison to-morrow evening, there to have a grand jubilte and an Illumination. This meetleg was more enthusiastic on account of the number of paroled prisoners proseat. They, and they alone know what freedom is, they having suffered long in Southern prisons. They added much to the enthusiasm of the meeting, cheering nearly all the time for Old Abe and Andy Johnson, and clessed with three hearty cheers for the Colonel Commanding. Yours, &c.,

A Union Soldier AND A PAROLED PRISONER OF WAR. THE NAVY.

like a mill-race. Until the engines started the four tuge attached to her could but just stem the current, and the ship, sheering from one side to the other, threatened to become wholly un manageable. But with the aid of her engines she moved aboad quite rapidly, taking everything into consideration. Narrowly excaping the running down of several ressels in the river, she finally get her head straight and steamed along finely. From the Battery to the peint where she anchored in the Bay, off Governor's Island, she steamed at the rate of | many years back his carried from the Contro gix knots against a strong tide, and with only Market the baskets of many of our citizens, whitper again, then you kiss his hand, and one fourth of her power developed. The engines worked smoothly and to a charm. They were not run up to half their maximum number of revolutions, but they drove the immense hull along at a rate of speed unsttainable by any of the old class of Meniters. What she will do when her full power is developed remains to be seen. One serious defect developed by the run city. He was 60 years old.

To day she will steam for a few hours to test the engines still more extensively, and on Monday, if everything proves to be right, she will have a trial of speed; and, if successful in all things, will be reported ready for sea. The following is a list of her officers: -
