THE WEEKLY CLIPPER.

We shall, as usual, issue promptly this morning, the Weekly Clipper, and we would suggest to those wishing a current and valuable summary of the news of the past week that they cannot do better than to order it for the week.

A VAST FIELD FOR BENEVOLENCE.

The past year of unbounded prosperity which favored the people of this country, has led to the case that in the happiness and plenty that came to all, any special appeal for charity was made to any. Except when some great accident from the sea, which destroyed a steamer or a railroad train, or some unusually sharp wreck upon our coasts, there seemed, in a general way, as we look at it now, little room for the exercise of that benevolence on a great scale, which is ever imperatively demanded by the condition of the ground down a crowded population of the old world.
