THE RESULT OF THE LATE PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION AS VIEWED IN EUROPE.

It is cheering at present to notice the indications that come to us from abroad, in relation to the Presidential election, and to note especially that the result has given new confidence to those staunch friends of the Union cause, who through evil and through good report have had faith so long that the integrity of the nationality would ultimately be maintained. Treated at the outbreak of the rebellion to a constant succession of the most audacious falsehoods and misrepresentations bearing upon the loyal States, from a subsidized press—almost every prominent literary journal abroad, especially, being at one time bought up for that purpose—it seems a marvel, now, that these villainous fabrications did not take deeper root than they have done, did not indeed overwhelm the few who had the talents and the principle to act as champions of our cause. Who does not, in this connection, remember that period about the time of the seizure of the Trent, when from foreign journals came almost one overwhelming and stunning volley of abuse, even the staid and discreet Blackwood lending its columns to the wholesale clamor, until, to the casual observer, it seemed as if the Union cause had hardly a friend on that side of the water of any eminence, except Messrs. Cobden and Bright, men whose career had been so in consonance with free principles, that it was not possible they should give in to the general outcry against us.

At that time, a period when the expediency of "intervention" was the all engrossing topic, who could have expected ever to have seen the Times talking of the power of the loyal States, with "bated breath;" who does not know that only the advent of the Monitor in Hampton Roads, and the gunnery afterwards in Charleston harbor, saved us from that threatened interference in our affairs which would have necessitated our engaging in a double and treble conflict? Counted by the mere lapse of months and years, that period does not seem so far distant; but reckoned by the march of events, and what a wondrous space has been traversed! The champions of despotism, the abettors of those who have entered the field here to establish slavery on a broader and firmer basis, and to found an aristocracy, have had ample time to reflect, and the result has been to convince them that to openly interfere in the conflict was not discreet, or, to use a more forcible phrase, that it "would not pay."

And it is satisfactory now to see the staunch little phalanx of our friends over the water at last conceded a place, a hearing by the vast concourse who but lately supposed they had matters all their own way in the formation of public opinion. Republicanism—free government, is not in favor there, where monarchs take such stringent methods to mould public sentiment; and the men who profess liberal principles must do so at the cost of incurring the hatred of all the hangers on of courts, the parasites who fatten upon the woes and wants of the people. And when these men do extort a hearing, when by the mere force of right principle, joined to high ability, they compel respectful audience, no higher tribute can be conceded to them: they indeed prove themselves the great oracles, or rather the active leaders of their generation.

And what a proud array of names are those who now champion our cause abroad! What names are of nobler significance than those of Cobden, Bright, and Goldwin Smith in England and those of Edouard Laboulaye, Gasparin, and Victor Hugo in France? The bright particular stars of their peculiar sphere, capable of discussing the great principles which lie at the foundation of all liberal government, by their side, as our friends, stand those innate and intuitive haters of tyranny and champions of freedom—Kossuth and Garibaldi, men whose names are the rallying cries of all who love liberty, and hate and contend against oppression.

These are the men—we say, and those who pattern after them, whose hearts are now made glad by the result of the Presidential election here. They have watched over and had faith in this very result, and the good sense and earnest patriotism of our people has justified their hopes and expectations. And now the time has come for them to justify their intelligent view of the matter, to remind their opponents of the tremendous issues at stake, the importance of the principles vindicated.

We have heard from several of these enlightened friends abroad, and our sympathies have been with them as they exulted over the glorious victories for free principles so fairly won. And it is cheering and pleasant to know that we need not stop with the publicists of France and England to find men of the highest enlightenment, who appreciate the nature of the struggle, the magnitude of the victory for the whole human race. When the rebel agent abroad hurried around to subsidize the newspapers, there were some of these certainly proof against his gold and his seductive influence, and let us quote of these the Berlin Evening Gazette. It says:

"The re-election of Lincoln is, however, "as we have observed, also of the utmost "importance for the entire quarter of the "globe called America. The champion of "absolutism in Europe had already begun "to exult over the prospect of republicanism "soon disappearing in America, and making place for monarchies. Indeed, it almost seems as if there existed a monarchical conspiracy against republican America; "France has already erected one monarchy "in Central America, and Spain and Brazil "are on the point of commencing a "struggle against the South American republics."

"The hope of this monarchical conspir "acy rested on the victory of the Confederate States. The latter were not only to erect "a strong dam against the progress of the "Union toward the South,—it was also "expected that they would themselves adopt "monarchical institutions, and place themselves "in connection with France. This hope must "now be relinquished. As soon as the "Confederate States are brought back into "the Union, the latter will border immediately on the new empire of Mexico. A "conflict probably to commence with the "Republican party in Mexico will then be "unavoidable, and even if France takes "her new creation under her protection, "the empire of Maximilian will just as "little be able to maintain itself as that of "Iturbide. In presence of the regenerate "Union, the rejuvanescent giantess, who, "in the feeling of her renovated power, "will take as her device the Monroe "doctrine—'America to the Americans,' "Spain and Brazil will not venture to "persevere in their attempts against the "South American Republics."

Now we ask—is it not gratifying in the highest degree to get from an enlightened organ of liberal principles, a judgment so clear as this in the premises? and who, glancing over what we have given, does not see the tremendous import of the late election, in its bearings upon the policy of other nations, as well as upon the opinions and feelings of the most liberal and enlightened of those called upon to deal with these issues? Even now we can hardly surmise the vast importance of the late political struggle to the general peace, to the triumph of those mighty principles of free government which are yet to dominate the world.

PAY OF OFFICERS IN THE ARMY.—We would direct the attention of our readers to an able article in to-day's issue, from the United States Service Magazine, on the necessity of increasing the pay of the officers of the army. The periodical referred to is probably the best authority in the premises, of any in the country; and it shows that whilst by bounties, rations, &c., the minor grades in the service have profited greatly, those who by the army regulations are obliged largely to supply themselves, have fared but poorly.

A BALTIMOREAN ON THE PACIFIC COAST.—The friends of J. D Hambleton, Esq., in this city, will be pleased to hear from him as having made his mark as a public speaker in the State of his adoption—California. The Napa County Reporter of October 8th thus handsomely notices one of his public efforts:

Mr. J. D. Hambleton succeeded him.—His style of eloquence is somewhat similar to that of Henry Edgerton's—rapid, caustic and vehement, but clothed in language of classic beauty and power, captivating the hearer with his tropical richness of fancy and chaste imagery. His sentences were rolled out with a directness that carried conviction with each swelling period, but the great strength of his address consisted in his truthful, earnest belief in what he said. He held the multitude spell-bound for an hour at least, and when he concluded the welkin rang with cheer after cheer, repeated and re-echoed back by the everlasting hills around.

THE MUSIC OF HALLE.

The old university town of Halle, in Prussia, must be in many respects a fascinating place. Of its musical opportunities, a correspondent of Dwight's Journal of Music writes:—

"In humble spheres, also, a healthy taste and love for music cannot but be cultivated, when an obscure restaurant advertises, joined to creature comforts, programmes like this: Trio by Beethoven; cello solo by Kummer; quartet by Haydn; or sonata for piano and violin by Beethoven; trio by Hummel; quartet by Mozart; or when an amateur orchestral Union promises (to the accompaniment of beer and pipes, and for a nominal price of admission) Beethoven's seventh symphony, a pastorale by Bach, Mendelssohn's 'Fair Melusina,' and a Fantasie from Lohengrin! Several times a week, too, the cafe of the people are fed by grand old chorals and notes, or beautiful secular quartets by Mendelssohn, Hauptman, &c., from the throats of the singing boys (the same institution to which Luther belonged in his youth) as they wander through the streets and sing before the houses of their patrons. True, distance sometimes lends enchantment to the sound; for a sensitive musical ear may be hurt by an occasional swerving fresh young voice; but the music, still remains, and cannot fail to find its way into the hearts of the hearers.

"No less impressive is another old custom still extant in Halle. Every evening, at nine o'clock, from one of the five towers that lend such beauty to the market-place, the Thurmer, or watchman, on some wind instrument, plays a solemn choral; repeating it to each quarter of the globe. Often this is followed by the touching hymn for the dead, 'How they so gently rest,' ordered by bereaved friends in memory of their departed. The effect is most beautiful; one would almost imagine the strains to come from heaven."

FAMILY COURTESIES.—In the family the law of pleasing ought to extend from the highest to the lowest. You are bound to please your children; and your children are bound to please your servants, if you expect them to please you. Some men are pleasant in the household and nowhere else. I have known such men. They were good fathers and kind husbands. If you have seen them in their own houses you would have thought that they were angels, almost; but if you had seen them in the street, or in the store, or anywhere else outside of the house, you would have thought them almost demoniac. But the opposite is apt to be the case. When we are among our neighbors, or among strangers, we hold ourselves with propriety; but when we get home we say to ourselves, "I have played a part long enough, and am now going to be natural." So we sit down, and are ugly and snappish, and blunt, and disagreeable. We lay aside those thousand little courtesies that make the roughest floor smooth, that makes the hardest things like velvet, and that makes life pleasant. We expect all our politeness in places where it will be profitable—where it will bring silver and gold.

PARDONED BY THE ITALIAN CANCELL.—Governor Seymour has signalized his retirement from office by pardoning the Italian barber, Cancemi, who was convicted of the murder of Policeman Anderson and sentenced to the State Prison at Sing Sing for life. Cancemi arrived in this city on Friday last. The circumstances connected with this murder created intense excitement at the time, and, notwithstanding the great efforts made by the prisoner's counsel to procure his liberty, he received the sentence above stated.—Cancemi was caught in the act of robbing the shoe store of Mr. H. Bamm, corner of Grand and Centre streets, and pursued by officer Anderson. During the pursuit Cancemi raised a pistol and fired at the officer, the charge taking effect and producing injuries which soon resulted in death. The murderer was then followed by a number of persons who witnessed the shooting, and secured in a building in Leonard street. An indictment against the accused was promptly found, and he was arraigned for trial. The case was subsequently carried to the Court of Appeals and a new trial ordered, which resulted in a sentence for life.—N. Y. Times, 28th.

☞ The London Spectator said, a month ago: "There is not a General now living in Europe who, if Sherman succeeds, will not recognize the addition of one more name to the short list of first class leaders of armies."

A Successful Coal Mining Machine.

The English papers notice the trial of a new coal cutting machine, the invention of an engineer residing at Leeds. The machine differs from any other yet invented, inasmuch as it is worked by water pressure conveyed from a small engine fixed near the bottom of the pit. The trial referred to was made in the Allerton seam of coal, which is five feet six inches thick, but contains a layer of dirt three inches thick at the height of twenty inches from the floor, which separates the first and second seams of coal. The machine was mounted on four wheels, and traversed on the coal tramways. The "holing" or "boring," which is the hardest and most laborious part of the collier's work, was done remarkably well, in one even straight line and to a uniform depth. The cutters were fixed in a slatting bar, worked with a steady longitudinal reciprocating motion at a slight angle, which ripped out the whole of the partition of dirt to a depth of three feet three inches.

The apparatus being entirely self-acting in all its operations, it propelled itself forward, secured itself dead fast between the floor and roof, whilst the cutters were in operation, and again released itself with the return stroke. The machine is strong, and not at all complicated, and is likely to work with durability. It is beautifully arranged in its various movements, and works with such precision and exactness that any one might almost fancy it was endowed with intelligence. One man is all that is required to attend to it, and he has nothing to do but to set it in motion and stop it when required. The machine worked on Wednesday two hours and forty-nine minutes, and excavated the dirt out three inches thick, and three feet three inches under, for a length of twenty-two yards and two feet, and liberated from the solid bed of coal forty-four tons. The average cost of "boring" by hand labor at the same colliery is 6d. per ton; but the principal saving is in the economical working of the coal without cutting such a large proportion into slack as is done by hand labor.—Pittsburg Chron.

A REMARKABLE PREDICTION.—The Hon. R. J. Walker, in his Thanksgiving address in London, said: "And now the Union troops hold Chattanooga, the great impregnable fortress of Northwestern Georgia. From Chattanooga, which may be regarded as the great geographical central pivot point of the rebellion, the armies of the Republic will march down to the heart of Georgia and join our troops upon the seaboard of that State, and thus terminate the rebellion.

Bricks made by steam, at the rate of 60 per minute, or 20,000 per day, in all weather, and hazard, ready to be removed to the kiln for burning, without the use of yards or sun, at less than one third the cost of hand-made Bricks, while they are stronger, handsomer, hold less water, and will stand double the pressure of hand-made bricks. They are preferred by all builders who have used them, there having been made over 300,000,000 by these Machines. One of them will clear $27,000 in 300 days, or over $35,000 per annum, if worked all winter, which is now being done at Johnstown, Pa., thus earning nearly three hundred per cent. per annum on investment—For further particulars and Patent Rights, call at the office of McIlhiser & Co., No. 19 South street, over the Gas Company's office.

Certificates of inspection by professional packers or inspectors, other than the party furnishing the provisions, will be required for meats, certifying on the part of the seller their present quality as to condition and the immediately preceding inspection.

The meat will also be examined and passed upon by parties from this office on the part of the United States.

Contractors are expected to bold their goods without expense to the United States until required for shipment.

Payment to be made in currency or its equivalent after the delivery of the stores if funds are on hand; if none on hand, to be made as soon as received.

Each person, or every member of a firm offering a proposal, must accompany it by an oath of allegiance to the United States Government, if he has not already filed one in this office. In addition thereto a certificate will be required setting forth that the articles offered the Government under the above advertisement, either belong to the party bidding or are to be purchased or received by them of loyal citizens for delivery to the United States Government.

Bids must be legible, and the numbers must be written, as well as expressed by figures.

All bids not complying strictly with the terms of this advertisement will be rejected.
