THE STORY OF A TREE. - A CHIPCOPORCERT' -----stood midway between the Union and rebel pickets, at a print where the lines are chir twenty fire yards apart. The tree's neutral preltion long protected it from destruction. but the searchty of fuel suggested a compromise, and it was agreed that it should be cut I down, and that both claimants should divide i its wood. A delegate from each picket line accordingly went forth to the tark, and by the vigorous axes of both, the trunk was soon levelled to the earth. Then arose animated debate as to which of the soldiers should have the batt and which the branches. Words were not concinsive enough to decide the question, and they room came to blows. A that, and the victor triumphantly carried to his camp fire the largest end of the log.
