Fort Monroe, March 21.—The steamer Ajax, Capt. Godfrey, from Morehead City, N. C., yesterday afternoon at two o'clock, arrived here with 200 refugees and about 100 discharged soldiers. The Ajax brings nothing later of a definite character respecting General Schofield's movement. His forces were known to have moved out from Kinston, but in what direction was unknown.

The Ajax was steaming out to sea from Beaufort harbor, all the flags of the various war vessels lying there were hoisted in their rigging, apparently as if rejoicing over some good news just received.

The refugees brought by this steamer are in the most destitute condition. They are principally from Kinston and its vicinity. There are about sixty women in the party with helpless children, the men in the company are all either sick or enfeebled by age.

The latest intelligence received from Gen. Sheridan was that his forces were still at the White House, resting and recruiting.

From the Army of the Potomac.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—From information received this morning from the Army of the Potomac, it appears that the rebels have erected a new battery to fire on our railroad trains between City Point and Hatcher's Run. On Monday it was opened, but the shells fell far short of the object directed at.

The March winds are rapidly drying the mud, and our troops are all ready in case of an emergency to move at any hour.

It is said that several days ago, a party of Sheridan's scouts were driven in from White Oak Station.

As the mail steamer for Washington was coming down the James River yesterday, immense columns of smoke were seen rising about ten miles below James town Island, on rebel soil. It appeared to be burning timber.

ARRIVAL OF STEAMERS AT NEW YORK.

THE CLOSING SCENES OF THE REBELLION.

(From the London Times, March 9.)

We seem to have arrived at that turning point of the American war which brings us, as it were, within sight of the final struggle, and the parties shall be called on to play it out.

The Federal army through Georgia and South Carolina, and the successive surrender of strongholds, believed to be impregnable, are very approvingly received. It means the only signs of Confederate exhaustion.

The great maritime cities, for the defence of which we have been fighting, have been in our hands long occupied by martial remnants of their former population.

Two months ago, as appears from the letters of our correspondent, Charleston, the very cradle of the "rebellion" was a deserted and half ruined city.

It was a scene of desolation, and the progress of the Federal army was such that men could not be found to spy the progress of the Federal army.

Material of all kinds was wanting. If the garrison could not be supplied with the necessities of the first attack, had supplied themselves with two or three rifled guns of large calibre, or had the complete outfit of the rebel army, it was not to be expected that they would have been able to hold the city.

The Richmond papers say that the Arsenal horse presented to Jeff Davis by the Victory of Egypt, and brought over by a blockade runner, and which was sent into the interior of North Carolina for safe keeping, has been captured by Sherman's soldiers, who announced their intention to send it to President Lincoln.

Potomac Flotilla.

Successful Expedition up Mattox Creek—Destruction of Vessels and Capture of Arms and Ammunition—Fight with Rebels.

(From the Washington Star.)

The official report of Commander Parker, of the recent expedition up Mattox Creek, in Virginia, has been received at the War Department.

The steamers Stepping Stones, Helioptone and Resolute entered Mattox Creek, Virginia, at daylight on the 16th, and landed armed patrols and scoured the country, finding on the south of the creek about fifty of Moby's cavalry, stationed at that vicinity, it is supposed, to protect contraband traffic across the North Neck, which was dispersed after a slight skirmish.

Afterwards the expedition destroyed three schooners under a fire of musketry.

The expedition returned after capturing a quantity of tobacco, smooth bore muskets, cartridges, caps, etc.

Acting Ensign Price, executive officer of the expedition, is complimented for gallantry and energy.

Heavy Bank Robbery.

NEARLY SEVENTY THOUSAND DOLLARS STOLEN FROM THE NATIONAL BANK—SIXTEEN THOUSAND REWARD.

United States "ten-forty" and "five-forty" are among the sixty-nine thousand dollars stolen yesterday afternoon from the Central Bank in Broadway, corner of Roede street, New York, and the sum of ten thousand dollars has been offered for their recovery.

The five-forty bonds which belonged to the bank were stolen in the following manner: They amounted to nineteen thousand dollars. The reward for their recovery is offered by the old issue, and were of one thousand dollars each. They belonged to other institutions or persons. A reward of six thousand dollars was offered for their recovery.

The five-forty bonds were in two packages, the five twenties comprising one and the ten-forties the other.

At half past two o'clock they were on the street, and a person was seen to enter the bank, and to take possession of the office.

He walked away, and for a few moments the attention was drawn from them.

When he returned to the counter where the bonds had been left, he observed that the five-forty bonds were gone.

It was subsequently ascertained that the person who had taken the bonds was a man of the name of...
