OF SPACE A MARY'S ORAUM. A little grave where violets cling. So small, you'd pass it unquestioning; No stone to mark where baby May

From mether's breast was laid away; Too hard and cold the marble seems To mingle with a baby's dreams; No need to tell to strat ger eyes That underneath our treasure lies. But to our hearts the world seems small, Beside this spot that holds our all. For we would give riches and lands For one soft touch of beby's hands. And as once more comes the sweet spring. And violets wake to blossoming. We look for her with hearts that break; Yet live the more for her dear sake. All things that He who made her gires. Knowing that in his love she lives. The earth is dearer for that sweet clay.
