

DAILY CLIPPER.

W.H. WALTERS.....Publisher.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 24, 1865

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

FOR THE

DAILY CLIPPER.

Two daily & half-past six weeks, payable to the Carrier.

Mailed to Subscribers out of the city at

25¢ FOR ONE YEAR.

20¢ SIX MONTHS.

15¢ FOR THREE MONTHS.

10¢ FOR ONE MONTH.

5¢ FOR ONE MONTH.

INSTITUTE IN ADVANCE.

TO ADVANTAGE.

The following extract of our regular daily will be used of service:

1 Square Mile.....$ 25

1/2 Square Mile.....15

1/4 Square Mile.....10

1 Month.....50

2 Months.....100

1 Year.....250

ONE SQUARE MILE CONTAINS SIX LINES OF SPACE.

OUR ADVERTISING AGENT.

One advertising agent for the city is Captain William Gibson, who will, as he has opportunity, call upon the old friends of the Clipper, and to whom any business in the advertising line can be handed. Our partners will send him on directly reliable.

CORRECT INDENTES.—Live startling occurrences have had the effect of calling forth so many contributions, especially in the line of poetry, that we have not room for title of them. Those clever enough to contribute them must therefore excuse their non-appearance in the majority of cases.

THE NATIONAL PAGANAT AT WASHINGTON.

The wonders of the great military pageant at Washington are all thought of us, and truly the scenes witnessed were worthy of the season in which they produced. As fast as the capacity of the Orleans family, has written a letter to Senator Sumner, relative to the death of President Lincoln. He says:—

"I should not have presumed to add my voice to the numberless expressions of sympathy and sorrow expressed by our friends in all personal relations with Mr. Lincoln, which faithfully will record among the most precious recollections of my youth, had not added something in my eyes to the memory of his noble and heroic character and my love and gratitude. Remember the way in which he admitted us four years ago into the Federal Union, the opportunity he then gave us to serve a cause to which we all readily fell bound by our family traits, and our sympathies as Freethinkers and poor.

"Those who saw Mr. Lincoln during that great period, when everybody seemed to be opposing against the salvation of the Republic, will never forget his frank and open expression of his faith, supported by a strong perception of his faults, deserved to be called emphatically a great man. And when the dreadful crisis during which he presided over the destiny of America, was born, he did not shrink under the rapid growth of an invigorated national and regenerated community, people will only remember its beneficial results, the destruction of slavery, the preservation of free institutions, and will always associate with them the name of Mr. Lincoln."

ADMISSIONS TO-NIGHT.

THEATRE.—The Stranger—The Devil's Wife.

THEATRE.—Seven Sisters.

MARYLAND THEATRE.—From Bill.

THEATRE.—Drama—Lester Lewis' Western Ad. His testimony to that of Miss Weston, Mrs. D. E. Bowes, and Mrs. Emma was in support of the efficacy of Mrs. Weston's "drama."

THEATRE.—Drama, No. 20, 1844.

James Jackson & Co., Gentlemen: I have received with entire satisfaction, the "Daily Times," "Advertiser," and "Advertiser," and division of your monthly appearance, to place it to know as being a very good paper.

While the paper in the hands of the story of the gorilla won the hearts of all those who had gathered from far and near to do them deserved homage.

Audubon Maryland, I marched by, its gallant representatives in the line honored and war like as they are, they too, bear their own flags, the evidence of many a fierce conflict in behalf of the noblest cause that ever claimed the efforts or services, who could not feel that the present as well as the past was "safe," that she had nobly proved herself worthy of these glorious traditions which make complete the honored record of the years which gave unconstitutional liberty, the glories of the olden time! Had that gallant plumed hero venturing to the prodigal, what to day in the period of the mighty triumph could have filled the void; who here would not feel a regret which would have led to the while life.

And then as the eye of the spectator glances from the moving column of the preceding spirits of the great conflict, as the glared out with grand stateliness General, who, with evident emotion received the cheers of the brave heroes, who dedicated their lives to the cause of freedom, who could not feel that the brave company which could make in terms on the basis of a divided Union, could not in this world have no reward.

At such a time, in such a situation, when the great triumph is achieved, he will not forget the restorer of the Republic was Washington was the founder.

And finally—the noble defenders of the nationality turn the faces homeward, let not their vision end with today. Let their broad brows wear the laurel of place every where, they are bound to rise up to them tomorrow. May this be the last as far as to the nation, for the sake of their vast labors, their bravery and heroism, their noble constancy, was concealed in the tubs of paint!

But there was, after all, one slight loss at the mighty pageant, one deep regret that would not be diminished. Now we say that it was that he whose prophet looked forward to the nation's triumph, was not there to share in that the brave company which could make in terms on the basis of a divided Union, could not in this world have no reward.

At such a time, in such a situation, when the great triumph is achieved, he will not forget the restorer of the Republic was Washington was the founder.

And finally—the noble defenders of the nationality turn the faces homeward, let not their vision end with today. Let their broad brows wear the laurel of place every where, they are bound to rise up to them tomorrow. May this be the last as far as to the nation, for the sake of their vast labors, their bravery and heroism, their noble constancy, was concealed in the tubs of paint!

But there was, after all, one slight loss at the mighty pageant, one deep regret that would not be diminished. Now we say that it was that he whose prophet looked forward to the nation's triumph, was not there to share in that the brave company which could make in terms on the basis of a divided Union, could not in this world have no reward.

At such a time, in such a situation, when the great triumph is achieved, he will not forget the restorer of the Republic was Washington was the founder.

And finally—the noble defenders of the nationality turn the faces homeward, let not their vision end with today. Let their broad brows wear the laurel of place every where, they are bound to rise up to them tomorrow. May this be the last as far as to the nation, for the sake of their vast labors, their bravery and heroism, their noble constancy, was concealed in the tubs of paint!

But there was, after all, one slight loss at the mighty pageant, one deep regret that would not be diminished. Now we say that it was that he whose prophet looked forward to the nation's triumph, was not there to share in that the brave company which could make in terms on the basis of a divided Union, could not in this world have no reward.

At such a time, in such a situation, when the great triumph is achieved, he will not forget the restorer of the Republic was Washington was the founder.

And finally—the noble defenders of the nationality turn the faces homeward, let not their vision end with today. Let their broad brows wear the laurel of place every where, they are bound to rise up to them tomorrow. May this be the last as far as to the nation, for the sake of their vast labors, their bravery and heroism, their noble constancy, was concealed in the tubs of paint!

But there was, after all, one slight loss at the mighty pageant, one deep regret that would not be diminished. Now we say that it was that he whose prophet looked forward to the nation's triumph, was not there to share in that the brave company which could make in terms on the basis of a divided Union, could not in this world have no reward.

At such a time, in such a situation, when the great triumph is achieved, he will not forget the restorer of the Republic was Washington was the founder.

And finally—the noble defenders of the nationality turn the faces homeward, let not their vision end with today. Let their broad brows wear the laurel of place every where, they are bound to rise up to them tomorrow. May this be the last as far as to the nation, for the sake of their vast labors, their bravery and heroism, their noble constancy, was concealed in the tubs of paint!

But there was, after all, one slight loss at the mighty pageant, one deep regret that would not be diminished. Now we say that it was that he whose prophet looked forward to the nation's triumph, was not there to share in that the brave company which could make in terms on the basis of a divided Union, could not in this world have no reward.

At such a time, in such a situation, when the great triumph is achieved, he will not forget the restorer of the Republic was Washington was the founder.

And finally—the noble defenders of the nationality turn the faces homeward, let not their vision end with today. Let their broad brows wear the laurel of place every where, they are bound to rise up to them tomorrow. May this be the last as far as to the nation, for the sake of their vast labors, their bravery and heroism, their noble constancy, was concealed in the tubs of paint!

But there was, after all, one slight loss at the mighty pageant, one deep regret that would not be diminished. Now we say that it was that he whose prophet looked forward to the nation's triumph, was not there to share in that the brave company which could make in terms on the basis of a divided Union, could not in this world have no reward.

At such a time, in such a situation, when the great triumph is achieved, he will not forget the restorer of the Republic was Washington was the founder.

And finally—the noble defenders of the nationality turn the faces homeward, let not their vision end with today. Let their broad brows wear the laurel of place every where, they are bound to rise up to them tomorrow. May this be the last as far as to the nation, for the sake of their vast labors, their bravery and heroism, their noble constancy, was concealed in the tubs of paint!

But there was, after all, one slight loss at the mighty pageant, one deep regret that would not be diminished. Now we say that it was that he whose prophet looked forward to the nation's triumph, was not there to share in that the brave company which could make in terms on the basis of a divided Union, could not in this world have no reward.

At such a time, in such a situation, when the great triumph is achieved, he will not forget the restorer of the Republic was Washington was the founder.

And finally—the noble defenders of the nationality turn the faces homeward, let not their vision end with today. Let their broad brows wear the laurel of place every where, they are bound to rise up to them tomorrow. May this be the last as far as to the nation, for the sake of their vast labors, their bravery and heroism, their noble constancy, was concealed in the tubs of paint!

But there was, after all, one slight loss at the mighty pageant, one deep regret that would not be diminished. Now we say that it was that he whose prophet looked forward to the nation's triumph, was not there to share in that the brave company which could make in terms on the basis of a divided Union, could not in this world have no reward.

At such a time, in such a situation, when the great triumph is achieved, he will not forget the restorer of the Republic was Washington was the founder.

And finally—the noble defenders of the nationality turn the faces homeward, let not their vision end with today. Let their broad brows wear the laurel of place every where, they are bound to rise up to them tomorrow. May this be the last as far as to the nation, for the sake of their vast labors, their bravery and heroism, their noble constancy, was concealed in the tubs of paint!

But there was, after all, one slight loss at the mighty pageant, one deep regret that would not be diminished. Now we say that it was that he whose prophet looked forward to the nation's triumph, was not there to share in that the brave company which could make in terms on the basis of a divided Union, could not in this world have no reward.

At such a time, in such a situation, when the great triumph is achieved, he will not forget the restorer of the Republic was Washington was the founder.

And finally—the noble defenders of the nationality turn the faces homeward, let not their vision end with today. Let their broad brows wear the laurel of place every where, they are bound to rise up to them tomorrow. May this be the last as far as to the nation, for the sake of their vast labors, their bravery and heroism, their noble constancy, was concealed in the tubs of paint!

But there was, after all, one slight loss at the mighty pageant, one deep regret that would not be diminished. Now we say that it was that he whose prophet looked forward to the nation's triumph, was not there to share in that the brave company which could make in terms on the basis of a divided Union, could not in this world have no reward.

At such a time, in such a situation, when the great triumph is achieved, he will not forget the restorer of the Republic was Washington was the founder.

And finally—the noble defenders of the nationality turn the faces homeward, let not their vision end with today. Let their broad brows wear the laurel of place every where, they are bound to rise up to them tomorrow. May this be the last as far as to the nation, for the sake of their vast labors, their bravery and heroism, their noble constancy, was concealed in the tubs of paint!

But there was, after all, one slight loss at the mighty pageant, one deep regret that would not be diminished. Now we say that it was that he whose prophet looked forward to the nation's triumph, was not there to share in that the brave company which could make in terms on the basis of a divided Union, could not in this world have no reward.

At such a time, in such a situation, when the great triumph is achieved, he will not forget the restorer of the Republic was Washington was the founder.

And finally—the noble defenders of the nationality turn the faces homeward, let not their vision end with today. Let their broad brows wear the laurel of place every where, they are bound to rise up to them tomorrow. May this be the last as far as to the nation, for the sake of their vast labors, their bravery and heroism, their noble constancy, was concealed in the tubs of paint!

But there was, after all, one slight loss at the mighty pageant, one deep regret that would not be diminished. Now we say that it was that he whose prophet looked forward to the nation's triumph, was not there to share in that the brave company which could make in terms on the basis of a divided Union, could not in this world have no reward.

At such a time, in such a situation, when the great triumph is achieved, he will not forget the restorer of the Republic was Washington was the founder.

And finally—the noble defenders of the nationality turn the faces homeward, let not their vision end with today. Let their broad brows wear the laurel of place every where, they are bound to rise up to them tomorrow. May this be the last as far as to the nation, for the sake of their vast labors, their bravery and heroism, their noble constancy, was concealed in the tubs of paint!

But there was, after all, one slight loss at the mighty pageant, one deep regret that would not be diminished. Now we say that it was that he whose prophet looked forward to the nation's triumph, was not there to share in that the brave company which could make in terms on the basis of a divided Union, could not in this world have no reward.

At such a time, in such a situation, when the great triumph is achieved, he will not forget the restorer of the Republic was Washington was the founder.

And finally—the noble defenders of the nationality turn the faces homeward, let not their vision end with today. Let their broad brows wear the laurel of place every where, they are bound to rise up to them tomorrow. May this be the last as far as to the nation, for the sake of their vast labors, their bravery and heroism, their noble constancy, was concealed in the tubs of paint!

But there was, after all, one slight loss at the mighty pageant, one deep regret that would not be diminished. Now we say that it was that he whose prophet looked forward to the nation's triumph, was not there to share in that the brave company which could make in terms on the basis of a divided Union, could not in this world have no reward.

At such a time, in such a situation, when the great triumph is achieved, he will not forget the restorer of the Republic was Washington was the founder.

And finally—the noble defenders of the nationality turn the faces homeward, let not their vision end with today. Let their broad brows wear the laurel of place every where, they are bound to rise up to them tomorrow. May this be the last as far as to the nation, for the sake of their vast labors, their bravery and heroism, their noble constancy, was concealed in the tubs of paint!

But there was, after all, one slight loss at the mighty pageant, one deep regret that would not be diminished. Now we say that it was that he whose prophet looked forward to the nation's triumph, was not there to share in that the brave company which could make in terms on the basis of a divided Union, could not in this world have no reward.

At such a time, in such a situation, when the great triumph is achieved, he will not forget the restorer of the Republic was Washington was the founder.

And finally—the noble defenders of the nationality turn the faces homeward, let not their vision end with today. Let their broad brows wear the laurel of place every where, they are bound to rise up to them tomorrow. May this be the last as far as to the nation, for the sake of their vast labors, their bravery and heroism, their noble constancy, was concealed in the tubs of paint!

But there was, after all, one slight loss at the mighty pageant, one deep regret that would not be diminished. Now we say that it was that he whose prophet looked forward to the nation's triumph, was not there to share in that the brave company which could make in terms on the basis of a divided Union, could not in this world have no reward.

At such a time, in such a situation, when the great triumph is achieved, he will not forget the restorer of the Republic was Washington was the founder.

And finally—the noble defenders of the nationality turn the faces homeward, let not their vision end with today. Let their broad brows wear the laurel of place every where, they are bound to rise up to them tomorrow. May this be the last as far as to the nation, for the sake of their vast labors, their bravery and heroism, their noble constancy, was concealed in the tubs of paint!

But there was, after all, one slight loss at the mighty pageant, one deep regret that would not be diminished. Now we say that it was that he whose prophet looked forward to the nation's triumph, was not there to share in that the brave company which could make in terms on the basis of a divided Union, could not in this world have no reward.

At such a time, in such a situation, when the great triumph is achieved, he will not forget the restorer of the Republic was Washington was the founder.

And finally—the noble defenders of the nationality turn the faces homeward, let not their vision end with today. Let their broad brows wear the laurel of place every where, they are bound to rise up to them tomorrow. May this be the last as far as to the nation, for the sake of their vast labors, their bravery and heroism, their noble constancy, was concealed in the tubs of paint!

But there was, after all, one slight loss at the mighty pageant, one deep regret that would not be diminished. Now we say that it was that he whose prophet looked forward to the nation's triumph, was not there to share in that the brave company which could make in terms on the basis of a divided Union, could not in this world have no reward.

At such a time, in such a situation, when the great triumph is achieved, he will not forget the restorer of the Republic was Washington was the founder.

And finally—the noble defenders of the nationality turn the faces homeward, let not their vision end with today. Let their broad brows wear the laurel of place every where, they are bound to rise up to them tomorrow. May this be the last as far as to the nation, for the sake of their vast labors, their bravery and heroism, their noble constancy, was concealed in the tubs of paint!