Destroying Property.--Owen Murphy and so to permit it to whitedraw. Jan A singular scene occurred lately at an execution at Athens. The condemned man, on arriving at the scaffold, appeared to feel awakened in him on instinctive clinging to life, and having his hands free, (as permitted by the Greek law. he suddenly felled one of the two executioners to the ground. The second at once drew out a polgnard and planged it into the breast of the eriminal, who still continued to make a violent resist ance. The man's arms were at length bound and his head laid on the sliding plank, but, in consequence of his violent moving, the blade of the guillotine fell only on his shoulder.
