GOING TO SLEEP.

BY MISS ELIZABETH A. C. AKERS.

The light is fading down the sky,
The shadows grow and multiply,
I hear the thrush's evening song;
But I have borne with toil and wrong
So long, so long!

Dim dreams my drowsy senses drown,—
Go, darling, kiss my eyelids down!

My life's brief spring went wasted by,—
My summer ended fruitlessly;
I learned to hunger, strive and wait—
I found you, love—oh happy fate!—
So late, so late!

Now all my fields are turning brown—
So, darling, kiss my eyelids down!

Oh, blessed sleep!—oh, perfect rest!
Thus pillowed on your faithful breast,
Nor life nor death is wholly drear,
O tender heart, since you are here,
No dear, so dear!

Sweet love, my soul's sufficient crown!
Now, darling, kiss my eyelids down!

LETTER FROM WASHINGTON.

[Correspondence of the Baltimore Clipper.]

WASHINGTON, June 13, 1865.

A Lady on Qualifications for Office.

Gen. Washington was compelled, at a very early period of his first Presidential term, to hedge himself within some form and ceremonial, by no means agreeable to the simplicity and frankness of his personal character. But it was found necessary in order to secure to him the amount of time indispensable for the consideration of public business. Many have regretted that his successors were ever induced to depart from the example thus set by the Father of his Country; and it is probable that a return to his practice would be entirely approved by the public, though it might not be so acceptable to some individuals.

Certainly the Chief Magistrate of the nation might, with great advantage, be saved from the largest portion of the visitations imposed daily and hourly upon him. In most cases the matters to which the visitors seek to bring his attention might be just as well presented to the different Departments at once; to which indeed they are any how ultimately referred.

This would allow to the President more time for seeing and listening to men who might have something to communicate that were worth hearing, and for attending to applications, wherein his direct interposition might be deemed essential or beneficial. But why should he be obliged to lavish his precious hours upon mere petitioners for subordinate offices?

The cry, however, is still "they come!"—The courteous Secretaries get along with the crowds as blandly as possible; and the pressure, it is hoped, will soon be over.

There is, at times, a good deal of amusement in the lobby and ante rooms, observing the movements and demeanor of those in waiting. A bright witted lady, the other morning, relieved the tedium of attendance by reading a page from Lady Mary Montague's Letters for the entertainment of a bevy of fair ones around her. She had evidently come to stay, and provided herself with a clever book to while away the lazy time.—The passage was in the vein.

Perhaps some of the worthy gentlemen from Maryland who figure occasionally among the solicitors—say once a week or two—may thank me for embodying this exhortation of a smart woman who knew the world.

"Towards the obtaining of ethos the first necessary qualification is impudence! (As Demosthenes said of action in oratory.) The second qualification is impudence. The third is still—impudence. No modest man ever did or ever will get on here. Your friends Mr. —— and Mr. ——, and other exemplars of quick advancement have been remarkably impudent! Office is like a play at court. There is a little door to get in; and a great crowd outside, shoving and thrusting who shall be foremost. People who knock others with their elbows, disregard a little kick of the shins, and still thrust heartily forward, are sure of a good place

"Your modest man stands behind in the crowd, is shoved by everybody, his clothes torn, almost squeezed to death, and sees a thousand get in before him who don't make so good a figure as himself. You may deserve everything and be capable of everything, but nobody will believe it, if you get nothing." By the time this passage was finished the whole party of listeners were wreathed in smiles. Now, was this not much better than to be spending the hours grumbling at the inexorable delay in reaching the audience room, and berating the lucky ones already admitted, who were stopping so unconscionably long?

A LOOKER ON AT THE CAPITAL

[COMMUNICATED.]

Editor of the Clipper: Sir—Much discussion is being had as to the future "status" of the colored man, particularly as to his rights in regard to the elective franchise. The great difficulty now presenting itself is not so much as to what should be his rights, as to the means by which these rights are to be conferred. It is alleged by most persons, who have made our Constitution and laws a study, that without some radical change the General Government has no right to interfere with or alter the laws of the States in regard to who shall or shall not vote.

Permit me, therefore, to suggest a simple remedy or plan that may possibly aid in securing to the colored man the vital privilege of aiding by his vote in the making of the laws to govern him, and, in all probability, save him from annihilation. As the three-fifths rule refers to the distribution, in regard to representation, (without the right of voting), is no longer applicable to the present condition of affairs, I would suggest that an alteration be made in the basis of representation, so that instead of basing it on population, as now, let it be based upon the legal voters, so that each State may have her Congressional representation in accordance, and the States to decide who are the legal voters. Should this plan be adopted, I have no doubt that many Southern States would increase their representation in Congress and the colored man be invited to the polls.

ELOPEMENT IN HIGH LIFE IN EUROPE.—The Russian imperial family have been in a state of consternation in consequence of an attempt made by a French actress to capture one of their members. The actress succeeded in carrying off her prey as far as Berlin, and but for the telegraphic wire, through whose malefiicent agency the flight of the happy couple to Paris was ruthlessly interrupted, their Imperial Majesties would have had to endure the mortification of a plebian slave, the hero of the adventure being no less a personage than the Duke of Luechtenburg, eldest son of the Empress' eldest sister, Grand Duchess Maria, aged twenty-two. The youth'ful inamora's was ignominiously escorted back to St. Petersburg by a Prussian police agent. The marriage was to have taken place in Paris, and, in consequence of a written promise having been signed by him, a very large sum of money has been paid over to the disappointed fiancee.

DISTINGUISHED ARRIVAL.—Professor Joseph Kosciuskoy, the leader of a number of Polish emigrants who have found an asylum in Switzerland, and been furnished by that Government with means to settle in this country, has arrived in Washington. Professor Kosciuskoy is bearer of some very high letters of recommendation from the President of the Republic of Switzerland; from Hon. George P. Fogg, United States Minister at Berne Switzerland, and from Mayor Gunther, of New York city.

☞ The Erie Railroad may well be called the milky way, as nearly one hundred thousand quarts of the lacteal fluid are carried over it daily to Jersey City.
