THE CLIPPER IS FREDERICK, MD.

Citizens of Frederick and vicinity wishing to have the "Daily Clipper," will be promptly served by leaving their names at the news depot and variety store of David F. Smith, our only agent in Frederick.

CP JOHN C. PARKER, No. 379 F street, between 5th and 9th streets, is agent for the Clipper in Washington, to whom persons wishing to subscribe can leave their names.

OUR ADVERTISING AGENT.

Our advertising agent for the city is Captain William Gibson, who will, as he finds opportunity, call upon the old patrons of the Clipper, and to whom any facts in the advertising line can be handed. Our patrons will find him extremely reliable.

OUR NATIONAL ANNIVERSARY.

Another day dawns upon us sacred to the commemoration of free government preserved, another national anniversary is ours, made a glorious occasion forever by new sacrifices for the advancement of our country and of the human race, such as can never be forgotten. And if with the great contest for freedom on the continent and half won, we have celebrated it in the past, if with the depressing consciousness that lurking causes existed which might some day imperil all that was dear to us as freemen, we still kept it with the hope of something better and more secure in the future, what should be our feelings to-day, when with the great problem of centuries finally solved—albeit with streams of blood and tears—yet we still know, at last, that the pathway of the great future is clear, that we have now the prospect of national progress and greatness such as the world never witnessed! Well may we to-day make manifest by every means in our power, the exulting consciousness of victory over wrong achieved, of that danger finally surmounted which can threaten us no more. Throwing from us that fearful incubus which had so long weighed down our hope and expectation, and prevented our progress, doing in a brief four years what men labor which dislocates, will smooth your ship like the smooth of an anchor. Sold by Druggists, Perfumers and Hardware stores. Wm. H. Head, 167 Baltimore Street, General Agent.

ANONYMOUS.—A young man, who thinks that a victory so wondrous, so nearly miraculous, could have been won with much less of fearful sacrifice—if there are those, too, who can smile upon the promising future only through their tears shed for the heroic dead, let such, too, be comforted, in the glorious consciousness that life is long enough which has already achieved great results for its country; that that example is complete, which can be appealed to in the future to strengthen the hopes and prospects of the whole world of humanity.

If a nation had been born in a day, has this nation taken its place amongst the foremost nations of the earth. With its very being threatened, with the existent whips of the despoils of the old world lashed propelling its speedy destruction, consigned in their view from time to time to that anarchy and those divisions which were to chronicle us as an extinct nationality, how have we won our way to success, to acknowledged greatness; how have we fought our way to a better destiny marked by deeds of heroism which must immortalize the defenders of the Republic forever?

Proud and happy, as we think of the great and promising future which thus opens out before us, yet subdued and saddened when we remember the price paid for the triumph, it is a day to review the past as well as to anticipate the future; to pledge ourselves one and all anew, to a perpetuation of those efforts in behalf of great principles, which are the best proofs that can be given that we appreciate the struggle and its results. And with the terrible sacrifices that have been made for our success, still fresh in our remembrance, reminded by the presence of the brave men to whom we owe so much, of the debt due, let the nation pledge its gratitude to them for all time to come; let our children be taught to honor them, to cherish them, to hold them in remembrance whilst any are left alive. Let there be no badge of honor known to the country of greater significance than the scars of wounds received in defending the life of the nation; let the empty sleeve or the crutch distinguish their brave possessors no medals or stars could do when the latter are won in fighting the battles of the despots of the old world.

And for the future, let the nation do what it can to nurture the highest order of patriotism, if it would perpetuate its greatness. Hallowing every occasion made memorable in the great conflict just ended, reviving from time to time the stories of victories won in behalf of free principles, of a loved Union, let every day thrown to the breeze be a new reminder of the sacrifices made to protect it in the past from dishonor, let the cannon which thunder exultantly on each anniversary be so many warning voices to those who in the interests of despotism would venture to assail the integrity of the nationality.

And if, finally, we have on this day peculiar cause for thankfulness, it is that the nation has set an example of forbearance, of ability to maintain its own equipoise, which before this occasion never was conceived possible. Emerging triumphantly from a gigantic struggle such as the world never before saw, the hundreds of thousands who have won for themselves immortal honor by deeds of unexampled heroism, are seen quietly laying down their arms, quietly abandoning to their keepers, while the movement is made to them that the republic is safe. Honoring the brave living and regretting the noble dead, let it be the general satisfaction of all who love their country, to live and cherish its defenders, to convince them who may come after us, that it is the highest duty to defend those principles which lie at the foundation of human progress; and without the success of which, the many are but the slaves of the few.

THE PASSENGER CARS AND THE PARK.

The crowds of pleasure seekers who will wind their way to the Park to-day to participate in the celebration of our great National Anniversary will doubtless be unexampled; and therefore it will be well to all to remember that for the sake of their own comfort, they should not crowd the cars too much at any one period of the day. Could the multitudes who will throng the various routes thither have it impressed upon them, that the morning is immensely pleasant out there, and that it should be taken advantage of as far as possible for a jaunt, it would distribute the burden more agreeably upon the cars, and insure a degree of comfort to all not likely to be attained when the rush is made within the brief space of time usually devoted to a trip thither and back again. The accommodations which answer to our wants in calling the attention of readers to the correspondence advertisement of Messrs. Smith, Bros. & Co., 46 West Baltimore Street. We speak what we know, that our present stock of clothing is ample, and we will do all we may want goods in this line. Well as small profits, and deal on the square with everybody.

THE MARYLAND FARMER.

The number of fine animals is cut promptly, and is as usual, filled with valuable matter in relation to Agriculture, Horticulture, Rural Economy and the Mechanic Arts. Conducted with a degree of frankness which leaves nothing undone apparently to make it valuable to all classes of the community, every number of it contains matter of consequence enough to make it a desirable acquisition to all who wish to keep up with the improvements of the times. We commend this more to all who want a good magazine devoted largely to rural matters, with a variety, besides, interesting to all persons of good taste. Let all who wish to subscribe apply to Messrs. E. S. Mills & Co., 21 South Calvert street, this city.

NEW BOOKS.—From Messrs. T. B. Petersen & Brothers, at the hands of the author, we have another new book from the prolific pen of Mrs. Henry Wood. It is entitled "Mildred Aristo," and is behind none of her works, we believe, in plot and counterplot, so far as we have had time to scan it.

From Frederick A. Brady, publisher, New York, we have "Family Fusions," an interesting novel by the author of "The Old Love and the New." Also to be had of Messrs. Henry Taylor & Co.

From Leonard Scott & Co., New York, we have "Blackwood" for June, an excellent number.

TEMPERS NOT TURNED OUT ALL ALIKE.—About tanning and finishing leather, the sea side or the country. Does not turner himself with a bad var. Get the air and the sunshine. Jabalo the full wealth of the breeze. You get no change of air; see that you get the sun. If you have a bad var. get the sun. The sun will not cure it, but will turn it over face and hands. It is good to have them. Let us have a good deal of exercise, and a good deal of dislocation, will smooth your skin like the skin of an infant. Sold by Druggists, Perfumers and Hardware stores. Wm. H. Head, 167 Baltimore Street, General Agent.
