CLOTHING. THE MISTERIOUS ARREST. BY THE BARD OF "MARPLE MALL" The electric wires fieshed the news Of import not a little fraught, "We have a prisoner of hote, In Texas everhauled and caught."

And back and forth the tidings ran. Setting all the land ablaze, "A prisoner, (mysterious hall is harried hast without delays. Some say 'tie one, who, linked in crime With those who worshipped Payne and Booth, Was striving to slude the law. Unwhitered by Justice's secred truth:" While cthers, more of "rebel" turn Inciet with weathful vim and rest, "We're under arbitrary rule, And must submit to such arrests. And so it flies from State to State. Forming matter-prose and song. But touch then forces oft is stranger.

And 'tie not strange they all are wrong. it has been found by close observation No the story, proper, goes, [but for ally is the man arrested. Krown, alasi just by his clother. He had purchased handsome clothing. Just to-day, fire months ago. Of these fachious bie clothiers. Messes. Suith Brothers & Co.: And unlucky for the fellow, He had dorned a suit that day. And was passing for a gentleman, While he tried to get away. But the officers pursuing.

(Who had each a handsome sait From the same fair dealing clothiers,} And the culptic was arrested— They had sought him out and won. Krew him by his handsome clothing. And he's now in Washington.
