THE PROMISE OF TRADE OFFER-ED BY THE SUCTH.

Upon occasion when we have insisted | that Baltimore should just at this juncture do all that is possible to reopen communications with and get the trade of the South, we have been met by the reply, Putnam John S. Russell and Mary E. Bump that that section "was so impoverished both of Baltimo: e-"that it had little to return to us for the "goods that might be sent thither." But facts are every day more and more elearly ; demonstrating that the view we have all along taken of the case, is the correct one; and that all that is needed to enable the South speedily to sustain itself and enter again on a career of prosperity, is the resteration of its steamboat and railroad communications, and the reorganization Enest William and Magdalene Ulrich. of labor and trade relationships interrupted, or destroyed by the war. We have insisted that the great leading staples were there in large quantities, and we have raugh seen New York, especially, with its usual shrewd foresight, acting upon that pre- months, Frank, son of William J. and Jennie sumption; and if returns have not been immediately made for goods sent, a foun. dation for future trade operations has been laid by that city, which is sure to tel. favorably for her in the long run. CLOTHING. SATAS OUTWITED-OR PHILOSO-PHY EXPLAINED. ST THE BARD OF MARRIE MALL." Chapter L. There was a man in Reisterstewn. His name was William Stokes. Who had a reputation

For playing people loker. He was a joily blacksmith, And though he was quite poor, He never les a beggar wander Hangty from his door. Now Bill was fond of teddy. And often after night, le'd loiter round the invern And come home very tight An aged, feeble beggat, Came up to Bill one day: I'm hungry, cold, and weary, Can you kelp me on my way ?" Bill's tender heart was melted. And he took the beggar home And fed him with the best he had And made him use his room. At early morn this old man said "You shall have your reward, Who giveth to the needy, Only lendeth to the Lord. "I offer you three wishes, And trust that they will be-Lt least a partial payment For your kindpost anto mo." My big sledge-bammer takes.

Says Hill; "My first wish to whoe'er Can't let it go or cease to beat Until his shoulder breaks. My second is: Whoe'er I seat Within my big arm-chair Cha't leave or move until I choose His further stay to spare. Mylast one ta: Whatever cash blace within My purse. Carnot be taken out matil I please to break the curse." [Continued next week.]
