THE NATIONAL DEBT.

There are those in the land who have, since the war was at an end, ventured to whisper the word "repudiation," appalled doubtless at the proportions assumed by the national debt: but the perfect roar of indignation which followed has taught all such—in connection with the emphatic declarations of the President—that repudiation would be the last idea tolerated; and that the American people intend to meet in good faith every obligation which was contracted to prevent the destruction of their government.

And that our obligations will be easily met, the advantages we possess, and the mighty progress we are making as a nationality, testifies. In the olden times when war debts were contracted by European nations, there were none of those almost miraculous means in use for multiplying wealth. The meagre results of taxation upon a starving and ruined peasantry, and what might be extorted from limited or burdened manufactures, or a half destroyed commercial marine, constituted the bulk of the finance minister's resources, when called upon to repair damages, and so it was that betwixt all this and the luxury of the nobles which conceded nothing, national obligations dragged on from generation to generation, in most cases piling interest upon interest, until as with England, Austria and some others that might be named, all hope of ever paying off the indebtedness seems hopeless.

But how is it with us, and in this age? In the first place, let us remember—that we are in possession of the most fertile and available agricultural region in the world; a land producing everything, from cotton and sugar to rye, wheat, and all else that enters into the manufactures and food requisitions of our own people and of the world; and that the improved machinery we have invented and have on hand, can multiply the results of human industry to an almost illimitable extent. In the wars of the olden time, the meagre results of the sickle, the "reaping hook" did the work of supplying the deficiency in food, caused by compelling able-bodied laborers to take the field. But in our own time, the sower and reaper and thrasher, impelled by horse and steam power, multiply results almost indefinitely, so that no famine follows or accompanies war, none of that loss and suffering from lack of labor such as used to scourge the nations of the old world.

And to it is that after the most gigantic war known to the history of nations, things go on almost as before. The immense granaries of the West are bursting with wheat and corn, the coal comes forward, the beef and pork and the hundred other articles which enter into the general consumption are quoted in the markets as they have ever been; and the nation confident in the future, in its strength, pushes its old enterprizes and inaugurates new ones, until wealth seems to multiply as ever, and the nation to prosper anew under inflictions which would have brought almost ruin and extinction to nations in the past.

And then as it to shame any remaining fears of the timid or doubting, out in the far West we find the gold and silver abounding which is made the basis of all values, and in quantities so great that exaustion is impossible. The bullion for the final redemption of all our obligations is there on deposit, and none who note the readiness with which our people enter upon its exhumation, can doubt the purpose to have all dragged to the light and into use, that industry and machinery can accomplish. Our bonds in some considerable amount are held abroad; yet how confidently can we thus point to the means in possession for their ultimate redemption, and who, under the circumstances, can indulge the remotest fears that every obligation will not be met, and the national honor preserved.

In view of the stubborn facts, then, let us go forward cheerfully to meet our future, to vindicate our splendid destiny—With the means in hand to accomplish our great mission knowing that if true to ourselves we cannot fail, let us look upon the nations debt—the bugbear of some—as only a stimulus to exertion, as money well expended in saving the nation from destruction, our children from a fate too terrible to contemplate.

SUPPOSED MURDER BY POISON.

A TOWNSVILLE MERCHANT SUPPOSED TO HAVE BEEN POISONED BY HIS BROTHER.

[From the Pittsburg Commercial, Sept. 26.]

Yesterday afternoon, Mr John Nicholson, a well-known resident of this city, waited upon Coroner Clawson, for the purpose of informing him of the facts and circumstances connected with the death of Mr. Leonard McCandless, of Brownsville, Fayette county, who died suddenly at that place about a week ago, from symptoms which induced the belief that he has been poisoned. Mr. Nicholson states that for the past five years Mr. McCandless had been engaged in the dry goods business in Brownsville, and had accumulated a comfortable competence. He had two brothers, James and William John, residing in Philadelphia, and a sister, Mrs McCance, residing on Pride street in this city. About a week before his death, Mr. McCandless had been ill with an attack of dysentery, but was recovering, when his brother James arrived from Philadelphia for the purpose of taking charge of the store during the temporary absence of Mr McCandless, who was about to be married to a Miss Mitchell, a resident of the Ninth Ward in this city, and intended to make a protracted wedding trip. James appeared to be greatly concerned about his brother's health, and procured for him some lemonade and wine cake, which he ate and drank, and was immediately thereafter seized with a most violent paroxysm which continued until death, which ensued in about half an hour. The suddenness of his death and the violent symptoms, gave rise to suspicions that the lemonade contained poison, but no one seemed disposed to act upon the presumption. The corpse was brought to this city, and taken to the house of his sister, Mrs. McCance, from whence the funeral was to take place. The body became very offensive in a few hours after death, and the undertaker, Mr. Myers, on viewing it, stated that there was every appearance of the presence of poison—The body was very much swollen, and froth was oozing from the mouth and nose. Mrs. McCance accused her brother James of having poisoned Leonard, but he denied the charge. The body became so offensive that it had to be removed to the receiving vault in Allegheny Cemetery, the friends intending to have the funeral on the following day at the hour fixed upon. James, however, visited the cemetery, had the grave dug at once, and insisted that the body should be interred without further delay. He almost quarreled with the undertaker for not consenting to have the body interred until the time fixed upon by the other friends of the family. The body was kept in the vault, and the funeral took place as originally arranged.

After the funeral James and William John McCandless left for Brownsville, for the purpose of arranging their brother's estate, and returned in a few days, stating that everything was settled, but declined entering into particulars. Shortly afterwards they both left the city, James saying that he was going to open a store in Uniontown, while William John said he would return to Philadelphia. The suppesition now is that the murder was planned by at least one of the brothers in order to secure possession of Leonard's money before his marriage. The matter will be investigated by the Coroner, who intends to have Mr. McCandless raised, and the contents of his stomach subjected to a chemical analysis. If the facts are as supposed, the crime exceeds in atrocity any of the Grinder cases, and the parties implicated will receive a deserved punishment.

QUEEN VICTORIA AND HER SPINNING WHEEL.—The Paris correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette, after announcing Queen Victoria's departure for Germany, relates this piece of gossip:

"Before leaving she took a fancy to spinning, and ordered a mechanic of Spitalfields to make her a spinning wheel. He finished one of so exquisite workmanship that the order of one for each of her palaces and castles. The good royal matron resumes the occupation of the simple ladies of the old and unaffected times, and, be sure, her example will not be lost on the ericalined and jeweled ladies of our age. The inclinations and fancies of queens dictate the fashion at the spinning wheel as well as at the court toilet."

DIARRHŒA AND DYSENTARY.—A sure remedy for the worst cases of acute or chronic Diarrhœa and Dysentery is Dr. Strickland's Pile Remedy. Hundreds have been cured by it in our Government uses it in the Hospitals. It has cured many of our citizens after all other means failed. In fact we have enough proof of the efficacy of this simple preparation. Astringents, anodynes, stimulants and carminatives, to advise every one of our readers to get a bottle and have it in readiness, and to those who suffer try it directly. Sold by SETH S. HANCE, 109 Baltimore st., and Druggists everywhere. Ask for Dr. Strickland's Allen Lewis Mixture.

TWO BAD CASES OF PILES CURED BY DR. STRICKLAND'S PILE REMEDY.—Mr. Glass of Janesville, Wisconsin, writes for the Remedy. He has suffered with the piles that he has been troubled for eight years with an aggravated case of Piles, and his brother was discharged from the army as incurable, the being quite paralyzed. Both have used Dr. Strickland's Remedy, and in both these cases were cured with one bottle of Dr. Strickland's Pile Remedy. The recommendation of these gentlemen, beside the daily testimonials received by Dr. Strickland, ought to convince those suffering, that the most aggravated chronic cases of Piles are cured by Dr. Strickland's Pile Remedy. It is sold by Seth S. Hance, 109 Baltimore st., and Druggists everywhere.

PIPES, &c.

NEOTERIC.
The PATENT NEOTERIC SMOKING TUBES are now in the Market. They combine purity with luxury, and convenience with elegance. They occupy no more space than a common Cigar Holder, yet by an ingenious breech-loading principle they can be smoked incessantly without re-lighting. They are unquestionably superior to anything ever before used for the purpose, overcoming all deleterious influences and offensiveness of smoking pipes.
Wholesale by the Manufacturers.
