The 20th & 21st Centuries
You will know you have left the 18th century part of the State House when you cross the black line in the floor. Notice the fossils embedded in the black limestone. Once you cross that line, you are in the “new” section of the building, built between 1902–05, often called the “Annex.”

As you cross into the 20th century part of the State House, be sure to look up the grand staircase at the monumental painting of Washington Resigning His Commission by Edwin White, painted for the Maryland General Assembly in 1859.

It is in this section of the State House that the Maryland Senate and House of Delegates meet for their annual 90-day Session between early January and mid April. Both the Senate and House of Delegates Chambers feature skylights by the studio of Louis Comfort Tiffany, as well as specially selected marble that reflects the red and gold of the Maryland flag.

The Senate Chamber
This chamber features historical portraits of Maryland’s four signers of the Declaration of Independence: William Paca, Thomas Stone, and Samuel Chase by John Beale Boddley, and Charles Carroll of Carrollton by Thomas Sully.

The House of Delegates Chamber
The portraits in this chamber are of former speakers of the House, arranged in chronological order, beginning at the right front. The two most recent speakers featured are Casper R. Taylor, Jr. and R. Clayton Mitchell, Jr.; their portraits are to the right and left of the rostrum.

The 21st century interpretation of the State House takes place every day as the governor, Lt. governor, speaker of the House and president of the Senate, all of whom have their offices in the building, carry out the business of governing Maryland.

The Maryland State House
Four Centuries of History
The Maryland State House was the first peacetime capitol of the United States and is the only state house ever to have served as the nation’s capitol. Congress met in the Old Senate Chamber from November 26, 1783 to August 13, 1784. During that time, General George Washington came before Congress to resign his commission as commander-in-chief of the Continental Army and the Treaty of Paris was ratified, marking the official end of the Revolutionary War. In May 1784, Congress appointed Thomas Jefferson minister to France, the first diplomatic appointment by the new nation.

It is in this section of the State House that the Maryland Senate and House of Delegates meet for their annual 90-day Session between early January and mid April. Both the Senate and House of Delegates Chambers feature skylights by the studio of Louis Comfort Tiffany, as well as specially selected marble that reflects the red and gold of the Maryland flag.

The House of Delegates Chamber
The portraits in this chamber are of former speakers of the House, arranged in chronological order, beginning at the right front. The two most recent speakers featured are Casper R. Taylor, Jr. and R. Clayton Mitchell, Jr.; their portraits are to the right and left of the rostrum.

The 21st century interpretation of the State House takes place every day as the governor, Lt. governor, speaker of the House and president of the Senate, all of whom have their offices in the building, carry out the business of governing Maryland.

The Maryland State House Facts
♦ Capitol of the United States, November 1783–August 1784
♦ America’s first peacetime capital
♦ Oldest state house in America still in continuous legislative use
♦ Declared a National Historic Landmark in 1960, the first state house in the nation to win such designation

18th Century Building
Date of construction: 1769–79
Architect: Joseph Horatio Anderson
Builder: Charles Wallace
Dome
Date of construction: 1785–94
Architect: Joseph Clark
Largest wooden dome of its kind in North America

State House Annex
Date of construction: 1902–05
Architect: Baldwin and Pennington

Basic Facts
Square footage: 120,900 square feet
Height of dome, exterior to weather vane: 181 feet
Height of dome, interior: 115 feet

Visiting the State House
The State House is open every day from 9 a.m. – 5 p.m., except Christmas and New Years Day. To help make your visit to the Maryland State House more enjoyable, and to provide you with an understanding of its rich and historic past, self-guided tour information is available in the Archives Room on the first floor. For information about the Maryland General Assembly’s educational programs, which might include a State House tour, see: http://dls.maryland.gov/library, then click on “Educational Tours” or call the Department of Legislative Services Visitors’ Coordinator on 410.946.5423. Group curatorial tours may be arranged by calling the Maryland State Archives at 410.260.6418.

Please note that security measures are in place at the State House and other state buildings. Picture ID is required for entrance and metal detectors are in operation.

The Office of Interpretation is a program of the Maryland State Archives. Donations to support the interpretation of the building are welcome. To learn more about the Maryland State House and its history and artwork, please visit our web site at: statehouse.md.gov

Welcome to the Maryland State House
A Self-Guided Tour for Visitors
November 2018

Maryland State House

The 20th & 21st Centuries
You will know you have left the 18th century part of the State House when you cross the black line in the floor. Notice the fossils embedded in the black limestone. Once you cross that line, you are in the “new” section of the building, built between 1902–05, often called the “Annex.”

As you cross into the 20th century part of the State House, be sure to look up the grand staircase at the monumental painting of Washington Resigning His Commission by Edwin White, painted for the Maryland General Assembly in 1859.

It is in this section of the State House that the Maryland Senate and House of Delegates meet for their annual 90-day Session between early January and mid April. Both the Senate and House of Delegates Chambers feature skylights by the studio of Louis Comfort Tiffany, as well as specially selected marble that reflects the red and gold of the Maryland flag.

The Senate Chamber
This chamber features historical portraits of Maryland’s four signers of the Declaration of Independence: William Paca, Thomas Stone, and Samuel Chase by John Beale Boddley, and Charles Carroll of Carrollton by Thomas Sully.

The House of Delegates Chamber
The portraits in this chamber are of former speakers of the House, arranged in chronological order, beginning at the right front. The two most recent speakers featured are Casper R. Taylor, Jr. and R. Clayton Mitchell, Jr.; their portraits are to the right and left of the rostrum.

The 21st century interpretation of the State House takes place every day as the governor, Lt. governor, speaker of the House and president of the Senate, all of whom have their offices in the building, carry out the business of governing Maryland.

The Maryland State House
Four Centuries of History
The Maryland State House was the first peacetime capitol of the United States and is the only state house ever to have served as the nation’s capitol. Congress met in the Old Senate Chamber from November 26, 1783 to August 13, 1784. During that time, General George Washington came before Congress to resign his commission as commander-in-chief of the Continental Army and the Treaty of Paris was ratified, marking the official end of the Revolutionary War. In May 1784, Congress appointed Thomas Jefferson minister to France, the first diplomatic appointment by the new nation.

It is in this section of the State House that the Maryland Senate and House of Delegates meet for their annual 90-day Session between early January and mid April. Both the Senate and House of Delegates Chambers feature skylights by the studio of Louis Comfort Tiffany, as well as specially selected marble that reflects the red and gold of the Maryland flag.

The Senate Chamber
This chamber features historical portraits of Maryland’s four signers of the Declaration of Independence: William Paca, Thomas Stone, and Samuel Chase by John Beale Boddley, and Charles Carroll of Carrollton by Thomas Sully.

The House of Delegates Chamber
The portraits in this chamber are of former speakers of the House, arranged in chronological order, beginning at the right front. The two most recent speakers featured are Casper R. Taylor, Jr. and R. Clayton Mitchell, Jr.; their portraits are to the right and left of the rostrum.

The 21st century interpretation of the State House takes place every day as the governor, Lt. governor, speaker of the House and president of the Senate, all of whom have their offices in the building, carry out the business of governing Maryland.

The Maryland State House Facts
♦ Capitol of the United States, November 1783–August 1784
♦ America’s first peacetime capital
♦ Oldest state house in America still in continuous legislative use
♦ Declared a National Historic Landmark in 1960, the first state house in the nation to win such designation

18th Century Building
Date of construction: 1769–79
Architect: Joseph Horatio Anderson
Builder: Charles Wallace
Dome
Date of construction: 1785–94
Architect: Joseph Clark
Largest wooden dome of its kind in North America

State House Annex
Date of construction: 1902–05
Architect: Baldwin and Pennington

Basic Facts
Square footage: 120,900 square feet
Height of dome, exterior to weather vane: 181 feet
Height of dome, interior: 115 feet

Visiting the State House
The State House is open every day from 9 a.m. – 5 p.m., except Christmas and New Years Day. To help make your visit to the Maryland State House more enjoyable, and to provide you with an understanding of its rich and historic past, self-guided tour information is available in the Archives Room on the first floor. For information about the Maryland General Assembly’s educational programs, which might include a State House tour, see: http://dls.maryland.gov/library, then click on “Educational Tours” or call the Department of Legislative Services Visitors’ Coordinator on 410.946.5423. Group curatorial tours may be arranged by calling the Maryland State Archives at 410.260.6418.

Please note that security measures are in place at the State House and other state buildings. Picture ID is required for entrance and metal detectors are in operation.

The Office of Interpretation is a program of the Maryland State Archives. Donations to support the interpretation of the building are welcome. To learn more about the Maryland State House and its history and artwork, please visit our web site at: statehouse.md.gov

Welcome to the Maryland State House
A Self-Guided Tour for Visitors
November 2018

Maryland State House
The 18th Century State House

The best place to begin your tour is in the Archives Room where you will find brochures and other information. This room also features exhibits about the building and State Circle and their evolution over the centuries. In 1858, this room was made fireproof, including the brick floor, to store and preserve the state’s records.

The Rotunda

The rotunda is the space below the dome and is the center of the 18th century State House, built between 1772–79. The dome was added to the building between 1785–94 and is the largest wooden dome in North America. It was built entirely without nails.

Under the dome is the case displaying George Washington’s personal copy of the speech he gave resigning his commission as commander-in-chief of the Continental Army in the Old Senate Chamber on December 23, 1783. Considered by historians to be the fourth most important document in American history, Washington’s resignation from power set the precedent for the military being under civilian authority. For much more information on this important event, visit the exhibits in the adjoining rooms.

The Old Senate Chamber

The Old Senate Chamber has recently been restored to its appearance when the United States Congress met here from November 1783 – August 1784. On December 23, 1783, General George Washington came before Congress to resign his commission as commander-in-chief of the Continental Army. Just three weeks later, on January 14, 1784, Congress ratified the Treaty of Paris, officially ending the Revolutionary War, thus making Annapolis the new nation’s first peacetime capital.

The arrangement of the furniture reflects the way the room looked on December 23, 1783 according to carefully researched protocols for important Congressional events in the late 18th century. Washington is shown facing the dais where the president of Congress, Thomas Mifflin, would have been seated. Above Washington is the figure of Molly Ridout, watching from the “Ladies Balcony,” as women were not allowed to be present on the Senate floor at that time.

The Senate Committee and Stairwell Rooms

In these two rooms, visitors will find new, interactive exhibits interpreting the events that took place during the time that Congress met in Annapolis in 1783–84, as well as information about Annapolis in the 18th century and the men and women who played important roles in these events.

Two very important historical portraits are featured in these three spaces: William Pitt over the fireplace in the Old Senate Chamber and Washington, Lafayette and Tilghman at Yorktown in the Committee Room. Both were painted by renowned Maryland artist Charles Willson Peale and have hung in the State House since the 18th century.

The Calverts: The Lords Baltimore of the Colony of Maryland

The 19th Century State House

In the lobby and on the grand staircase are 17th and 18th century full-length portraits of the Calverts. These portraits portray an entire dynasty of colonial proprietors, the Barons (or Lords) of Baltimore, and bring to life the earliest history of Maryland. The family owned the Colony of Maryland under a charter that conveyed one of the most extensive grants of powers conceded by the crown of England during America’s period of colonization. Its proprietary rule ended with the American Revolution in 1776.

Two monumental paintings in this chamber were painted in the 19th century by Francis Blackwell Mayer: The Planting of the Colony of Maryland, showing the first colonists celebrating their safe arrival in Maryland in 1634 by planting a cross on St. Clement’s Island, and The Burning of the Peggy Stewart, which depicts the protest by Annapolitans of the importation of tea in 1774. The large portrait is of Thomas Holliday Hicks, governor from 1856–62.

The recreation of this space was guided by photographs that have been recreated to how it looked in the late 19th century. Interpretation of this room focuses on the expansion of rights in Maryland in the 19th century, including the right for Jews to hold public office, the abolition of slavery in Maryland, and the writing of the state Constitution of 1867 that is still in effect today. New bronze figures of Harriet Tubman and Frederick Douglass are planned for this space. Both were born in Maryland and devoted their lives to achieving the abolition of slavery.

The State House Caucus Room

Next to the Old House of Delegates Chamber is the Old House of Delegates Room that features a display of the USS Maryland silver service. This beautiful silver set, made by Samuel Kirk & Sons of Baltimore, was partially paid for by money raised by Maryland school children for the cruiser USS Maryland in 1906.